No Beer, Yet.
A Chill in the Street.
Lady Astor Is Frank.
Half Inch At a Time.
—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

NO BEER, in a hurry. The House of Representatives yesterday defeated by 6 votes Mr. Garner's joint resolution for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Two hundred and seventy-eight votes, two-thirds of the House, were necessary for repeal.

The wets had a big majority, but lacked six votes of two-thirds. There will probably be no repeal of the amendment this session, and you will not be surprised by the vote if you have thought about it.

FAILURE OF Mr. Garner's resoluton may mean an extra session. It is probable that having gone on record against repeal, the "lame duck" session will not pass over a veto an amendment to Volstead Act that would mean a change to beer, not including wine.

Gov. Roosevelt may feel bound to put the Democratic platform into effect by calling Congress to talk it over and carry out party pledges.

WALL STREET, which has been having chills and fever, chill one day, fever the next, in the good old malarial fashion, for some time past, had both fever and chill yesterday, in the morning feverish, cheerfulness, and the afternoon, a chill, when news came that the repeal resolution had failed.

The beer bill would not make so much difference. Anybody who imagines that hundreds of millions will be collected in beer tax, with no plans for adequate distribution of the beer, is mistaken.

It's one thing to legalize beer, another to sell it. The saloon is not coming back. Where will you sell the beer, in speakeasies?

FRANKNESS IS admirable. Lady Astor, young American woman who showed her British sisters how to get into Parliament, by having intelligence and energy, studied the "hunger army" in Washington yesterday and talked to the marchers as they passed.

Several that asked her "Are you a Communist?" were surprised by her reply:

"No, I am a red hot capitalist."

Such complete frankness appealed to the marchers.

EACH OF us is what circumstances make us. Ninety-nine per cent of those marchers would also be "red hot capitalists" if they had an income of a million dollars a year or more.

It is even possible that Lady Astor would be something of a Communist if her husband, Lord Astor were in that hunger parade, and she were with him dragging two or three hungry children on foot.

A KIND-HEARTED man whose dog had a long tail not in the fashion, knew that he must cut off the dog's tail, and hadn't the heart to cut it off all at once. So he cut off half an inch every day.

That is what kind-hearted Germany seems to be planning for some of the private American lenders who sent her hundreds of millions recently.

She now asks a cut in the interest rate, which would mean a sacrifice of $5,000,000 a year by the United States lenders. That is the first half-inch off the tail.

PROF. EINSTEIN, indignant that respectable American ladies want him investigated and excluded as a "Red," Communist and Bolshevist, threatens to cancel his visit to the United States. He should not do that, but recall the very sound German saying:

"The world loves to blacken that which is brilliant."

IT IS NOT creditable to the United States that Prof. Einstein, applying for a passport visa, desiring to come to this country as an INTELLECTUAL TEACHER, should be held up in Berlin by an official of the United States consulate and questioned about Communism, pacifism and anarchism, simply because some dear ladies choose to indulge in innocent self-advertising.

It is not probable that President Hoover will allow one of the greatest living scientists to be further annoyed, even by respectable ladies.

JAPAN IS kind enough to give United States delegates at Geneva a new plan for reducing armaments.

Very thoughtful, but does this nation NEED suggestions for reducing armaments from anybody?

We didn't need them when we had 4,000,000 people here instead of 123,000,000. What makes us need them now?

Why not simply tell other nations:

"We KNOW what this country needs, and intend to have it. We are perfectly peaceful, have only friendship for all of you. But we don't need any advice about protecting the United States.

"And we invite you to come here, look around, form your own opinion of what would happen to any country attacking the United States."

GUNMEN GET MILLION IN BANK MAIL

By WEST PETERSON.
International News Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—Masked by handkerchiefs like the old-time train robbers, five bandits today held up a veteran registered mail carrier and his guard just across the street from the Federal Building and escaped with notes and securities estimated to be worth at least $1,000,000.

With calculated precision, the gang surrounded the messenger and his escort, disarmed the guard, and seized two mail sacks. Throwing these into the rear of a light car, they drove away and were out of sight before an alarm could be given.

CHECK UP ON LOOT

One sack contained 123 pieces of registered mail for the First National Bank, and the other contained 40 pieces for the First Union Trust and Savings Bank.

The usual morning delivery of registered mail to these banks totals from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

Fred Voelsch, who has delivered bank mail for 16 years, left the Federal Building at 7 a. m. with the sacks slung over his shoulder. Three paces behind walked Frank Stastny, the guard, a former Army man.

They crossed Clark street, a major artery of traffic and began walking north when four of the bandits closed in from the rear.

PERILED BY GUNS

A fifth member of the gang appeared driving a car which had been parked around the corner. The pair who had seized Voelsch tossed the sacks into the rear of the machine and then scrambled in themselves.

The two who had attacked Stastny, having disarmed him, leaped away from the guard and jumped into the car as it picked up speed and shot north on Clark street. There was no license number.

BREW LEVY INCLUDED IN PLAN

Senate Sends Glass Repealer Back to Committee

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Legislation to legalize and tax the sale of 2.75 per cent beer and wines was drafted today by Chairman Collier, of the House Ways and Means Committee, as the basis of hearings beginning tomorrow.

Collier explained that although the bill places alcoholic content of beer at 2.75 by weight, this percentage was chosen simply as a basis on which to work. He said:

"It will be for the committee to determine the content desirable."

TAX RATE $5

The same is true of the tax rate, he went on, noting that his bill would levy $5 a barrel on beer and 20 cents a gallon on natural grape wines made "without the addition of distilled spirits."

Witnesses designated by Secretary Mills will be the first heard tomorrow.

Advocates of modification in the House immediately turned their inquiring eyes on the Collier bill, inasmuch as he heads one of the most important committees slated to go into the matter. It would become effective 30 days after enactment.

Only a majority is required in House and Senate to enact such a measure, as compared with the two-thirds vote needed for approval of constitutional amendments such as that rejected in the House yesterday by a 144 to 272 vote.

That vote showed a 128 majority in favor of outright prohibition repeal, and a change of six votes would have given a two-thirds margin.

Collier estimated to newspapermen that his bill, after being in operation for a while, would yield $300,000,000 annually in revenue.

Meanwhile, Senator Tydings (Dem.), of Maryland, sponsored a bill to strike ½ of 1 per cent from the Volstead act and allow the

Hoover Program For Restoring U. S. Prosperity

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Here are the major proposals which President Hoover laid before Congress today for restoring economic equilibrium:

A special manufacturers' sales tax to cover practically all manufactures at a uniform rate, except necessary food and possibly some grades of clothing.

Widespread reforms of the banking system.

Sweeping reorganization of the government.

A flat 11 per cent pay cut for federal employes, with a $1,000 exemption, in addition to the present 8 1-3 reduction under the furlough system.

Reductions in appropriations under those for the present fiscal year of $830,000,000, offset in part by increases of $250,000,000 in "uncontrollable items."

Curtailment of expenditures for public works from $717,262,000 to $442,769,000.

PRESIDENT DEMANDS ECONOMY

Message Recommends Program to Aid Recovery

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—President Hoover, in his last annual message to Congress, today recommended a general sales tax as necessary to balance the budget, radical reform in the nation's banking structure, and drastic reduction in all forms of governmental expenditure, federal, state and local.

Suiting the deed to the word, the President reported to Congress that the budget which he will transmit tomorrow will call for $580,000,000 net less expenditures than are contained in the budget for the present fiscal year.

VIGOROUS CO-OPERATION

Coupled with these recommendations, Mr. Hoover further declared that if the United States is to return to the prosperity it once enjoyed there must be "vigorous and whole-souled co-operation with other governments in the economic field."

On the burning issue of prohibition, the President's last message was eloquently silent. The word did not appear throughout the almost 5,000 words of his last report to Congress on the state of the nation.

Nor did Mr. Hoover touch extensively upon the war debts, but the reason for this is understood to be that he will shortly transmit to Congress a special supplementary message dealing with this controversial issue.

Conversations with the debtor countries over the manner in which they are to meet their December 15 payments are still in progress, and the President did not wish to embarrass them by specific recommendations at this time.

He referred only in passing to the recent general election, which saw the greatest defeat his party has witnessed in years.

AID TO RECOVERY

But, he declared, there are three definite directions in which governmental action can strengthen

Three Department of Justice Agents sat in the room with Vice President Curtis as the delegation headed by William Reynolds entered. Reynolds said:

"These requests represent the minimum requirements for life for millions of people."

Reynolds began to say, "We haven't much confidence that you," when Mr. Curtis demanded:

"Stop that, no reflection on me."

Reynolds finished:

"—That your body will put these demands in effect."

Reynolds said he intended to "go back and say to the workers

MOTHER FOUND DEAD, 2 HELD

Police today detained a man and a woman for questioning in the death of Mrs. Marie Wolf, 26, of 1027 Decatur street, young mother of two children, whose body was found this morning in the rear of 1418-20 Bidwell street.

Those held were Pearl Stewart, 35, and John Stepney, 70, both living at 1026 Warlo street. They were held after police learned Mrs. Wolf had been visiting at the Warlo street address. Both denied having seen her.

Through examination by Dr. J. W. McMeans, coroner's physician, it was determined the woman had died from exposure and acute alcoholism.

Police at first expressed the belief the woman had been murdered. The Wolfs have two children, Edward, 7, and Raymond, 6.

3 GUNMEN ROB GIRL CLERK

Three young men, posing as borrowers, held up a girl stenographer of the Personal Finance Company, 6124 Center avenue, near the heart of East Liberty today, and fled with $60.

Miss Anna McDermott, 23, of 3373 Webster avenue, was alone when the three entered and asked to apply for a loan.

When she ushered them into a private office one of them pointed a revolver at her and said:

"We don't want any loan, we want your money."

While one kept her covered with the gun another took a $20 gold-piece from the safe and $40 from the cash drawer, she told police. They fled and are believed to have escaped in an automobile.

Libby Holman Begins Estate Settlement

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Negotiations looking toward a final settlement in February of the estate of the late Smith Reynolds, tobacco fortune heir, have been begun by attorneys for the Reynolds family and Libby Holman Reynolds, the youthful millionaire's widow.

Counsel refused to disclose any figures or to say along what lines the settlement would be made.

Mrs. Reynolds, former Broadway torch singer and Albert Walker, Winston-Salem youth, were cleared of murder charges in connection with Reynold's death when the indictments against them were nol prossed for "lack of evidence."

Final settlement of the estate, it was said, is being delayed so that attorneys may be able to take action "after the baby comes."

Mrs. Reynolds disclosed shortly after her husband was found mortally wounded, July 6, that she was to become a mother. She said the baby would be born in January, and that it would be named "Smith" regardless of its sex.

Cat on Pole Two Days Leaps As Aid Nears

Fearless efforts of the South Side police and an employe of the Bell Telephone Company went for naught today. Mike, a four-year-old, rain-soaked cat, refused to be rescued from the top of a 30-foot pole and jumped to safety.

The telephone in the South Side police station rang this morning and John Kasonavich said:

"My cat is up a pole. I want you should rescue it."

Radio Patrolman Charles Schmidt dashed to the scene, rear of 2611 Jane street, and found Mike, very bedraggled, on the top of the pole where he had been for two days.

H. L. Meyers, an employe of the Bell Telephone Company, working in the neighborhood, seeing Schmidt was making no head way, put on his spurs and started up the pole.

But Mike was not in the mood to be rescued. Just as Meyers was about to grab him, the cat jumped to safety on his master's own roof, 10 feet away.

DAVIS CAMPAIGN COST ACCOUNT REJECTED BY STATE

SENATOR SHUNS OPENING DAY OF CONGRESS

Whereabouts Mystery As Beamish Calls For Election Report

HARRISBURG, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—The State Election Bureau today had rejected United States Senator James J. Davis' campaign expense account.

Davis failed to submit vouchers covering items of more than $10 as required by state law. He was given until Thursday to turn them in to Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the commonwealth.

The action yesterday followed a conference between Gov. Pinchot and Secretary Beamish.

Davis, a Republican, reporting on his successful campaign for re-election, showed no contributions, expenditures of $1,589 and an apparent unpaid obligation of $2,500 on which further information was requested.

G. O. P. GIFT REQUEST

Under the heading "unpaid debts or obligations," Davis made this notation:

"Two thousand five hundred dollar contribution to Republican State Committee requested, but not yet paid."

In a letter to Davis, Secretary Beamish asked whether this notation is "an acknowledgment of a debt or merely a notation of a request?"

Davis' secretary, Frank K. Boal, in a letter accompanying the report, said that Davis is retaining vouchers in Washington for either or both the federal and state authorities.

Referring to items of expenditures, Secretary Beamish said:

"Davis does not show to whom numerous payments were made, nor the places where the money was expended."

The penalty for failing to file proper expense accounts is refusal to allow the successful candidate to take office.

DAVIS SHUNS SENATE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Under indictment on charges of violating the federal lottery law, Senator James J. Davis (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, did not respond yesterday when his name was read at the first Senate roll call.

The question of whether Davis would go into the Senate before his trial this month was raised unofficially here last week. The Pennsylvania Senator refused to comment.

It was reported that several Senate Republican leaders advised Davis not to sit in the Senate while he was under indictment. Davis would not say whether he was so advised.

Davis has not let his whereabouts be known generally since he left the Army-Navy football game in Philadelphia Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Davis, who was with him at the game, said Sunday night she had not seen him since that time.

Servants at the Davis home here last night said neither the Senator nor Mrs. Davis was in, and that they did not know where the Senator was.

Davis' secretary at his office also said he did not know where the Senator had gone.

SPECIAL DEBT MESSAGE DUE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Simultaneous with a reiteration in his annual message to Congress that European war debt payments due December 15 should be met, President Hoover today made known through one of his secretaries that he would send a special message to Congress upon the debt problem.

Theodore Joslin, of the White House secretariat, called newspapermen to his office, adjoining that of the President, to tell them orally:

"Negotiations are still being conducted concerning the war debt problem. There is no doubt that the President will send to Congress a supplementary communication when these negotiations are completed."

He declined to amplify this statement or give indication when the message might be expected.

ITALIANS VOTE TO PAY U. S.

ROME, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—The Grand Council of Fascism presided over by Premier Mussolini, last night recommended Italy pay the entire $1,245,437 due the United States December 15. The payment represents only interest due.

The council also recommended that upon payment of this sum the Italian government initiate negotiations for a new accord before June 15, when Italy's next principal payment was due.

The council said a new accord should be based "on the recent declarations" of President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt.

Italy had failed to join France, England and other European nations in asking reconsideration of payments due this month.

U. S. ARMS CUT PLAN OPPOSED

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Proposals offered by the American delegation to the World Disarmament Conference are in their present form not acceptable to Germany, German delegates indicated shortly after statesmen from five leading nations resumed conversations this afternoon.

The suggestion known as the Davis plan is based on the "necessity for immediate action" and advances the idea of a convention dealing exclusively with disarmament. It proposes to scale down arms immediately and provide a permanent commission to work out the details of security, equality and other points which the nations have been considering for months.

Indications were that Germany's final yes or no might not be delivered this evening since Premier MacDonald, of England, and Premier Herriot, of France, were leaving for Paris.

It was their intention, it was learned from reliable authority, to consider the debt problems which confront both nations. Premier MacDonald is due to return here Thursday, and Premier Herriot's return is set for Saturday.

GENEVA, Dec. 6.—(INS.)—China and Japan clashed before the League of Nations assembly today over the dispatch sent by Edward Hunter, International News Service staff correspondent in Manchuria, confirming the massacre of 2,700 Chinese peasants near Fushun by Japanese troops.

As part of an impassioned appeal asking the League assembly to find Japan guilty of violating the League covenant, the Kellogg-Briand pact and the nine-power treaty, Dr. W. W. Yen, of China, read before the assembly a summary of Hunter's dispatch, closing with the words:

"No further comment is necessary. I ask in the name of humanity that the League Assembly protest with all its energy against such massacreing of our civilian population by the Japanese."

Yosuke Matsouka, Japanese delegate, sprang to his feet when Dr. Yen had finished and deviated from his prepared address to deny that the massacre had occured.

BEER AND WINE MEASURE DRAFTED

Legislation Proposes Tax on Sale of Beverages courts to decide what constitutes an intoxicating beverage.

FOR EARLY ACTION

He will urge early consideration for the measure, which would levy a tax of 1 cent a glass or 2 cents a pint on beer. The Senator estimated this would raise $200,000,000 the first year and more later.

The Senate today referred back to its Judiciary Committee the Glass resolution proposing repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and substituting a ban against the saloon.

This had been suggested as the probable vehicle for early prohibition debate promised in the Senate, where both the Republican and Democratic leaders agreed today that the issue will certainly be threshed out this session.

A bill to legalize liquors up to 4 per cent alcohol was introduced by Senator Barbour (Rep.), of New Jersey.

He also is author of a resolution to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, now on the Senate calendar.

Senator Blaine (Rep.), of Wisconsin, said he was preparing a resolution repealing the Eighteenth Amendment, but providing for regulation of interstate commerce in liquor.

HARRIS RAPS G. O. P. CHIEFS

HARRISBURG, Dec. 6.—Leaders of the Republican party in Pennsylvania are responsible for the indifference or open and active antagonism to carefully planned programs of legislation to wipe out election evils and abuses, Senator Frank J. Harris told the Election Laws Conference here today.

Harris said the motive probably was the old conservative policy of letting well enough alone and stated the electorate is beginning to turn. He said:

"In my own county, fraud goes boldly on, notwithstanding the many detections and subsequent arrests and convictions. These warnings have proved no deterrent and adequate election laws must be set up to control the dishonest politician who has no desire for clean elections."

Harris urged the conference consider the same program as in 1931 and added:

"The coming session holds out more hope for victory than we have had for years."

EX-WIFE SEEKS MILLION BALM

DETROIT, Dec. 6.—(INS.)—Charging alienation of affections, a million-dollar suit was served on Mrs. Gail Stephens Kinard, second wife of Dr. Kerwin W. Kinard, noted surgeon of Kansas City, Mo., here early today.

The present Mrs. Kinard, wealthy horsewoman and social registerite, is accused of having stolen the love of Dr. Kinard from Mrs. Ada Lee Kinard, of Kansas City his former wife, whom he married 14 years ago.

Dr. Kinard and Mrs. Stephens were married in Toledo, O., November 14, the ceremony bringing to climax a romance which had endured for 25 years—from the time they met in Berlin when the surgeon was a medical student and Mrs. Stephens a student of arts.

Mrs. Kinard No. 1 accuses her rival of stealing the doctor's love by reviewing memories of this youthful romance after a chance meeting of the couple in Detroit two years ago.

The testimony of Deputy State Attorney General David Glick that Miss Anna Ellis Friesel, 28, of 4901 Friendship avenue, made false entries in the books of the closed Bloomfield Trust Company by order of a bank official without knowing the import of her action resulted in parole of the young bookkeeper today.

State Road Camp Soon to be Closed

GREENSBURG, Pa., Dec. 6.—The Pleasant Unity road camp, maintained by the state and employing 70 men continuously since last winter, will be closed December 15.

GOV. ROOSEVELT FOR SESSION

By RAYMOND I. BORST
International News Service.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Dec. 6.—President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt starts North today pretty well convinced he will be forced to call Congress into special session next spring if relief is to be provided for the farmer and beer is to be legalized.

Privately he is said to feel that defeat by the House of the Democratic resolution submitting repeal of the prohibition amendment to the states has dimmed the prospect of having the Volstead law modified at the "lame duck" session.

The President-elect would like to avoid a special session. He would hesitate to summon Congress into session simply to deal with the prohibition question, close friends indicated. But he regards farm relief as the cornerstone for the restoration of prosperity and he is determined his agricultural program must be enacted, even though it involves a special session, it was said by persons close to him.

Lewis Busy Trying To Go Down Hill Gracefully

SEMMERING, Austria, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Sinclair Lewis, who is trying to learn to ski at this winter resort, near Vienna, is getting weary of answering reports that he is in bed with pneumonia at London. He told a newspaperman today:

"For Heaven's sake, tell anybody who's interested that I have completely recovered from a cold and I'm working hard at the art of sliding down hill gracefully."

President's Message Silent on Dry Controversy

the forces of recovery and confidence:

1—"Continuing reduction of all governmental expenditures, whether national, state or local."

2—"Complete reorganization at once of our banking system."

3—"Vigorous and whole-souled co-operation with other governments in the economic field. The first need today is the strengthening of commodity prices."

On the tax situation, and the pressing need of a manufacturers' sales tax, Mr. Hoover had this to say:

"Some of the older revenues and some provided under the act passed during the last session of Congress, particularly those generally referred to as nuisance taxes, have not been prolific of income. Further revenue is necessary in addition to the reduction in expenditures.

"Many of the manufacturers' excise taxes upon selected industries not only failed to produce satisfactory revenue, but are unjust and discriminatory.

"The time has come when, if the government is to have an adequate basis of revenue to assure a balanced budget, this system of special manufacturers' excise taxes should be extended to cover practically all manufactures at a uniform rate, except necessary food and possibly some clothing."

CURTAILMENT PLANS

In line with his recommendation of drastic curtailment of federal expenditures, Mr. Hoover proposed no new federal building projects, and temporary, at least, discontinuance of the federal government's aid to the states in road building.

He had praise for these federal activities during the past two years, saying they had aided employment, but he thought the condition of the Federal Treasury would not warrant their continuance.

As for further federal economy, he proposed a flat 11 per cent reduction in governmental salaries above $1,000, and promised to submit his recommendations for consolidating and re-grouping over 50 executive and administrative agencies.

He also declared his intention of recommending widespread slashes in the governmental payments to world war veterans.

The message Mr. Hoover sent to the Capitol was not only his final report on the state of the nation, but it was the shortest of such documents that he has submitted.

that our message has been delivered."

At the House end of the Capitol, Speaker Garner walked out of his office and said:

"Good morning, gentlemen."

Spying one woman in the group, he added:

"Good morning, young lady."

Benjamin spoke for the delegation. He said:

"We request an opportunity for representatives of the unemployed to present their demands before Congress. We would like some statement from you that we could carry back that there would be some relief from their misery."

After Benjamin made his plea, Speaker Garner said:

"I'll take it under consideration. That is all I ever do when people present a plea, whether they be hunger marchers, senators or farmers.

HOOVER OUTLINES VITAL ISSUES FACING NATION IN MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

General

Our county is at peace. Our national defense has been maintained. All of the executive department of the government have been conducted during the year with a high devotion to public interest. There has been a far larger degree of freedom from industrial conflict than hitherto known. Education and science have advanced. The public health is today at its highest known level.

In the face of widespread hardship our people have demonstrated a magnificent sense of humanity, and responsibility for the welfare of the less fortunate.

In the provision against distress during this winter, the great private agencies of the country have been mobilized again; the generosity of the people has again come into evidence. The provisions made for loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to states that have exhausted their own resources, guarantee that there should be no hunger or suffering from cold.

Economic Situation

The unparalleled world-wide economic depression has continued. Due to the European collapse, the situation developed during last fall and winter into a series of most acute crises. The unprecedented emergency measures enacted and policies adopted undoubtedly saved the country from economic disaster. These measures began in July to show their weight and influence.

The measures and policies which have procured this turn toward recovery should be continued until the depression is passed, and then the emergency agencies should be promptly liquidated.

The expansion of credit facilities by the Federal Reserve System and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been of incalculable value.

Balancing the Budget

The executive budget will show proposed reductions in appropriations below those enacted by the last session of the Congress by over $830,000,000. These sums will be partially offset by an increase of about $250,000,000 in uncontrollable items.

In the budget there is included only the completion of the federal public works projects already undertaken or under contract. Speeding of federal public works during the past four years as an aid to employment has advanced many types of such improvements to the point where further expansion cannot be justified. As an aid to unemployment we should, beyond the normal constructive programs, substitute reproductive or self-liquidating works.

The federal construction program thus limited to commitments and work in progress under the proposed appropriations contemplates expenditures for the next fiscal year, including naval and other vessel construction, as well as other forms of public works and maintenance, of a total of $442,769,000, as compared with $717,262,000 for the present year.

I recommend that the furlough system installed last year be continued because, it sets an example which should be followed. I feel in view of the decrease in the cost of living by over 20 per cent, that some further sacrifice should be made by salaried officials of the government over and above the 8½ per cent reduction.

I will recommend measures to eliminate certain payments in the veterans' services. Many abuses have grown up from ill-considered legislation. The nation should not ask for a reduction in allowances to men and dependents whose disabilities rise out of war service nor to those veterans with substantial service who have become totally disabled from non-war-connected causes and who are without other support.

Some of the older revenues and some of the revenues provided under the act passed during the last session of the Congress, particularly those generally referred to as the nuisance taxes, have not been prolific of income.

Many of the manufacturers' excise taxes upon selected industries not only failed to produce satisfactory revenue, but they are in many ways unjust and discriminatory. If the government is to have an adequate basis of revenue to assure a balanced budget, this system of special manufacturers' excise taxes should be extended to cover practically all manufactures at a uniform rate, except necessary food and possibly some grades of clothing.

At the last session the Congress responded to my request for authority to reorganize the government departments. The act provides for the grouping and consolidation of executive and administrative agencies according to major purpose, and thereby reducing the number and overlap and duplication of effort. I shall issue executive orders within a few days grouping or consolidating over 50 executive and administrative agencies, including a large number of commissions and "independent" agencies.

Banking

The basis of every other and every further effort toward recovery is to reorganize at once our banking system. The shocks to our economic system have undoubtedly multiplied by the weakness of our financial system.

As a system our banking has failed to meet this great emergency. Without question our losses and distress have been greatly augmented by its wholly inadequate organization. Its inability as a system to respond to our needs is today a constant drain upon progress toward recovery.

Bank failures rose in 1931 to 10½ per cent of all banks, as compared to 1½ per cent of the failures of all other types of enterprise. Since January 1, 1930, we have had 4,665 banks suspend, with $3,300,000,000 in deposits. We have witnessed hoarding of currency to an enormous sum, rising during the height of the crisis to over $1,600,000,000.

That this failure to function is unnecessary and is the fault of our particular system is plainly indicated by the fact that in Great Britain, where the economic mechanism has suffered far greater shocks than our own, there has not been a single bank failure during the depression. Again, in Canada, there have not been substantial bank failures.

The creation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the amendments to Federal Reserve act served to defend the nation in a great crisis. They are not remedies; they are relief. It is inconceivable that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation can go on indefinitely.

It is a matter of satisfaction that the rate of bank failures, of hoarding, and the demands upon the Reconstruction Corporation have greatly lessened. The acute phases of the crisis have obviously passed and the time has now come when this national danger and this failure to respond to national necessities must be ended and the measures to end them can be safely undertaken. There is no reason now why solution should not be found at the present session of the Congress. Inflation of currency or governmental conduct of banking can have no part in these reforms.

Economic Co-operation With Other Nations

Our major difficulties during the past two years find their origins in the shocks from economic collapse abroad. If we are to secure rapid and assured recovery and protection for the future we must co-operate with foreign nations.

We have actively engaged in a world disarmament conference where with success, we should reduce our own tax burdens and the tax burdens of other major nations.

We are participating in the formulation of a world economic conference, successful results from which would contribute much to advance in agricultural prices, employment and business. We could by successful action increase security and expand trade through stability in international exchange and monetary values.

The European governments, obligated to us in war debts, have requested that there should be suspension of payments due the United States on December 15 next, to be accompanied by exchange of views upon this debt question. Our government has informed them that we do not approve of suspension of the December 15 payments. I have stated that I would recommend to the Congress methods to overcome temporary exchange difficulties in connection with this payment from nations where necessary.

RIDING MASTER GIVES OWN VERSION OF GIBSON ROMANCE

SCORES COUSIN WHO TESTIFIED FOR GIRL

Mother, Sisters Aid Man Accused as Betrayer

International News Service.

NEW CITY, N. Y., Dec. 6.—Sidney Herbert Homewood, riding master, whose love-making has brought him to court for the alleged betrayal of Charlotte Gibson, society girl, today gave his version of the romance, from a witness stand at his trial in Supreme Court here.

Yet from the quiet-looking lad came dramatic testimony from the very start. His cousin Alec, who has testified against him and who was the tale-bearer to Miss Gibson's father, was asked to leave his home because "he couldn't leave one of my sisters alone," Sidney recounted.

NO ROMANCE

There was no trace of romance about the lad as he told of his first meeting with the society girl, who soon will bear a child she says is his. She came to the stables to inquire about buying a horse, and after that to take lessons, like any other customer, he declared. Finkelstein asked:

"Did Miss Gibson take lessons every time she came to the academy?"

"Yes."

"Who gave them to her?"

"Either I or my cousin, Alec."

"Did Alec give her more than one lesson?"

"Yes, about five."

ALEC DISPUTED

Alec has sworn he only gave Miss Gibson one lesson.

Homewood became engaged to Miss Bishop in August of 1931, with full knowledge of the Bishops and the Homewoods, Sidney related. He gave her a ring with "more than one diamond in it," which Miss Bishop wore in the presence of Miss Gibson, he said.

It was just after Christmas, last year, that he told Miss Gibson of his engagement. He never denied his relationship with the Wheaton College junior, he added.

He told how the girl had brought Lieut. Angelo Del Campo, of West Point, to the stable, remarking about Del Campo that his people were socially good and her father had taken her to West Point to meet him. The father has testified they met Del Campo by chance, when he was delegated as their guide at the military academy.

Then Sidney spoke of his cousin Alec again. He saw Miss Gibson and Alec embracing at one time and that Alec called the girl "Babe." Alec has said this was his name for the girl's horse. Miss Gibson also spoke of car rides with John King, Homewood added.

RELATIVES TESTIFY

Sidney's sisters, Ethel Emmeline and Annie Dorothy; his mother, Mrs. Homewood, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Frank Reginald Homewood, preceded the defendant on the stand this morning.

"She was unladylike," Ethel Emmeline Homewood said. She came out of the stables with Alec Homewood. Sidney's cousin, and her hair was down, Annie Dorothy, the other sister, declared.

Then the most damaging testimony of all was given—by Mrs. Frank Reginald Homewood. She has not been friendly with her sisters-in-law for some time, she asserted.

She saw Miss Gibson and Alec in a compromising position when she walked into the stables suddenly last February, she said.

EX-SPY KILLED ON YACHT; 14 FACE QUIZ

Mystery Man Sought As Police Grill Many Women

International News Service.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Dec. 6.—Fourteen persons, including several women, were held in the Long Beach jail today as police investigated the mysterious murder of Capt. Walter Wanderwell, world adventurer, former German spy and organizer of sea tours, who was shot to death on his yacht, The Carma, riding at anchor in Long Beach harbor.

Search was underway for "a middle aged man wearing a gray suit," who was said by four of Capt. Wanderwell's guests to have inquired in the main salon of the vessel for the adventurer.

A few minutes later the guests and members of the crew heard a shot. Tey found Capt. Wanderwell dead—shot through the back—in an unlighted cabin. Capt. Wanderwell's two children, asleep in an adjacent cabin, were awakened by the shot.

SEARCHING SHIP

Wanderwell and a girl companion, police said, were arrested during a "honeymoon hike around the world," and Wanderwell, whose real name they said was Walter Pieczynski, was interned as a German spy in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., for two years during the World War.

The four persons who said they had seen the "middle-aged man" who inquired for Capt. Wanderwell were among the 14 held for questioning. They were Miss Marion Smith, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Nellie Parks, Boston; Cuthbert Wills, chief engineer of the yacht, Los Angeles, and Edmund Zeranski, Hollywood cameraman. They were discussing with Wanderwell plans for a proposed voyage to the South Sea Islands.

BRITISH LORD HELD

Among the 14 held were Lord Edward Eugene Montagu, of London, and Miss Mary L. Smith, Atlanta, Ga., a sister of Miss Marion Smith, who also was interested in Capt. Wanderwell's cruise plans.

Mrs. Aloah Wanderwell, the victim's pretty wife, was located at the home of a sister in Hollywood and brought to the jail here. Police said she told them she was separated from her husband after years of companionship and was working as a film cutter in a Hollywood studio.

Capt. Wanderwell was known in many ports of the world, Lieut. Miller said, and had resided before coming here in Detroit, Atlanta, New York and Miami, Fla.

Lieut. Miller today booked the 14 persons, including seven women and members of the crew, as "material witnesses" and held them incommunicado in the Long Beach Jail. He said:

"We think we're hot on the killer's trail."

WOMAN ROBBED; HELPED SNARE BANK BANDITS

Perry Bank Loot Found in Home; Loses Gems

Mrs. Frances Beezer, in whose rooming house in Tripoli street $1,560 of the $5,000 obtained two years ago by bandits in the holdup of the Perry State Bank, 3908 Perrysville avenue, was recovered, early today was a victim of a highwayman.

Walking to her new home at 604 Suismon street, Mrs. Beezer was held up by an armed man who robbed her of three rings valued at $350, she told police, after he had spurned her purse.

The recovery of the loot of the Perry bank in Mrs. Beezer's home and description of four men who rented the room alued police in a speedy solution of the daring bank robbery. The four men were sentenced to long prison terms after their alleged leader had been shot to death in a skirmish with New York detectives.

COUNCIL WEIGHS CHURCH UNION

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Co-operation between denominations is necessary, Bishop Francis J. McConnell told the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America today, "before we can have a union among the churches."

The Methodist Episcopal bishop made the declaration in addressing the opening session of the quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council, of which he is president. Reviewing the four years he has held the office, Bishop McConnell said:

"You can't get union among the churches simply by passing a resolution about it. You have to think together; you have to live together in terms of Christian fellowship, and then, the first thing you know, union is simply the ratification of a condition that already exists."

Lebrun to Give Prize To Mother of 22

LE MANS, France, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—The twenty-second child of Joseph Boisse, of Parce, has a distinguished godfather—President Albert Lebrun. The President couldn't come to the christening, but the local deputy represented him as proxy. Madame Boisse is to have the Legion of Honor award.

The western low pressure developed into a well-defined storm center over Southern Kansas. Lowest barometer reported, 29.54 inches, at Wichita. The low is now in the form of a long trough extending from the panhandle of Texas northeastward to Eastern Ontario. The southeastern high moved out over the coast, while a high of marked intensity appears in the Canadian Northwest. Highest barometer is 30.70 inches at Edmonton. The low pressure is producing light rainfall over the Ohio Valley and snow over the northern plains and the Central Rocky Mountain states, while the northeastern high is causing a marked drop in temperature to zero or below.

M'CLOSKEY SEES ROUT OF FOES

Mayor Edward McCloskey, of Johnstown, who described himself as a pretty good ham and egg fighter, today had predicted that his political enemies would end not with nervous breakdowns, but with St. Vitus dance.

Visiting in Pittsburgh yesterday afternoon, he laid his troubles to politics. Earlier in the day, at Johnstown, he had been held for court on charges of perjury, illegal voting and three charges of wilfully releasing commonwealth prisoners. In a statement, he said:

"Alderman Patterson, who held me for court, is a former police magistrate I fired. Milton Good, the investigator, admitted Attorney Mahlon Baumgartner and Detective Capt. John Carroli had asked him to make the information.

"Good also admitted he did not know what was contained in the affidavit upon which the perjury suit is based.

"They maintained the affidavit declared I was out of town on three registration days. The affidavit didn't. It simply said absent from city."

School Board Acts To Silence McCloskey

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—The Johnstown school board has requested the municipal radio station, WJAC, to refuse its broadcasting facilities "to persons who give utterances to wild, reckless and unsupported statements."

Loan Officer Shot In $800 Holdup

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., Dec. 6.—Two bandits shot Secretary-Treasurer A. L. White in the arm and obtained between $800 and $1,000 in a holdup of the Federal Building and Loan Company here shortly before noon today. The bandits, traveling in an auto, fled toward Pennsylvania.

White was alone in the bank when the bandits approached under the pretense of seeking a loan.

Farmer Battles 20 Deputies for Land

7 Held in Burning Of Lake Steamer

DETROIT, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Prosecutor Harry S. Toy said that seven men, including Capt. William Nicholson, veteran Great Lakes shipper, are under arrest in connection with an arson conspiracy plot growing out of the burning last June of two steamers at their moorings in Ecorse.

EINSTEIN GETS U. S. VISA

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—(INS.)—Fully recovered from his fit of anger at American authorities, Prof. Albert Einstein received his visa from the United States consulate today.

The famous German scientist will start for the United States on Saturday.

The professor was called to the consulate yesterday and questioned about his political beliefs. Authorities told him this procedure was usual before granting a visa, but Einstein considered the questioning an "inquisition." Today, however, he said:

"I suppose the consulate cabled to Washington, asking their approval before giving me a visa, since the charges of Communism levied against me were absurd.

"I was never bothered about getting a visa before, thinking it merely a matter of course. That's why I was rather astonished at the ceremonies this time."

LAUGHLIN MAY BE RECALLED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(Universal.)—Ambassador Irwin B. Laughlin, of Pittsburgh, will be recalled and diplomatic relations severed if Spain takes over the International Telephone and Telegraph Company interests there, it was learned in high official quarters.

The issue was to be brought to a head today when the Cortes, national assembly of Spain, votes on a question to repeal the company's charter, granted by former King Alfonso, and place the $65,000,000 American investment in the hands of the Spanish government. Advices indicate a substantial majority of the Cortes favors repeal.

MADRID, Dec. 6.—(Universal.)—The Spanish government, it was said today, is willing to negotiate with the I. T. & T. in order to ward off severing of relations with the United States.

France Aids Trotzky Return Into Exile

PARIS, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Leon Trotzky, the exiled Russian Bolshevik, and his party were hurried across France today by the same extensive police escort that saw them through en route to Copenhagen recently.

Trotzky is returning to his home of exile on Prinkipo Island in the Sea of Marmora. He gave several lectures in Copenhagen.

Wants to Teach Young That Life Is 'Headache'

That will be the usual conversation of 6-year-olds, if Dr. Leta S. Hollingsworth, professor of psychology at Teachers College, Columbia University, has her way.

All children should be completely disillusioned before they are 12 years old, says Dr. Hollingsworth. She added today:

Santa's Toy Works Delayed as Fumes Rout Workers

Santa Claus was interrupted at his work for a short time early today when seven employes of the Wolverine Manufacturing Company, top manufacturers, at Fontella and Page streets, North Side, were chased from the building by fumes from a broken chemical bottle. Fireman from Engine Company No. 47, answering a still alarm, donned gas masks and removed the bottle.

Fire of undetermined origin burned through the vacant second and third floors of a three-story building at 622 Collins avenue early today, causing an estimated loss of $1,500. The building was owned by Mrs. Madeira Levy. The first floor was occupied by her brother, C. Pansimora.

'32 REVUE OPEN AT SING SING

OSSINING, N. Y., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—The 1932 edition of the "Sing Sing Revue", featuring a cast of several accomplished malefactors, opened to the public last night in the prison chapel.

The show opened with a skit in which the performers essayed the roles of gangsters and "gun molls." With flashlights and guns, they came stealthily out onto a darkened stage, while cold shivers ran up and down the spines of the audience.

Warden Lewis E. Lawes, thinking his charges might forget they were only acting, had caused the weapons to be crippled.

Jack Carmen, a burglar, played the "leading lady" in this act, which had its denouncement when a policeman arrived in time to prevent a well-planned robbery. The moral was, even the best planned robberies often go wrong.

Crooners, dancers and comedy teams made up the rest of the show, which will be presented again tonight.

SEXTON CHECK FREES TWO

BEAVER, Pa., Dec. 6.—H. Clay Sexton, Beaver broker, and E. A. Ford Barnes, Pittsburgh accountant, were freed today by Judge W. A. McConnell after Sexton had satisfactorily explained a check for $2,000 given in payment of an order of court.

After the two men, convicted of conspiracy to defraud Mrs. Vye S. Thompson and Mrs. Jean P. Dawson, society widows, of a fee of $4,500 assigned to them by Sexton, had been given the option of paying $6,700 or serving time in the workhouse, Sexton and Barnes each gave their checks for $2,000. Samuel B. Markley, Beaver, put up a third check for $2,700. A telephone message to a Pittsburgh bank resulted in a statement that Sexton had no account there. This was later said to have been a bookkeeper's error.

In the meantime the judge could not be reached and Barnes and Sexton were committed to the County Jail. They came into court yesterday and sought to explain the check. The court committed the two to jail for further investigation of the check. Today Sexton's explanation was satisfactory and both were freed.

NAZI ATTACKS HINDENBURG

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Gen. Karl Litzmann, 82-year-old Nazi, opened the new Reichstag this afternoon with a tirade against President von Hindenburg, shouting that history may curse him for driving the country into Bolshevism. He cried:

"Hindenburg became the savior of Germany in November, 1914, with the assistance of Litzmann's brigade of infantry at Lodz. That battle brought him a field marshal's baton. Today something more important than a baton is at stake.

"For Hindenburg it is a question of escaping the curse which history may lay upon him for having driven the German people into despair and delivered the country to Bolshevism."

When he referred to Adolf Hitler as the greatest living German and the only man who can save the nation, the National Socialist members cheered and the Communists booed. The old general, elected because of the custom which tenders to the oldest member the privilege of becoming speaker pro tem, wore all his war decorations.

Chancellor von Schleicher, who assumed that office yesterday, was present for the opening, a decree of dissolution ready for use if he needed it.

A MOTHER'S DEATHBED

HERE WAS FOUND THE BODY OF A YOUNG MOTHER TODAY

Police in the North Side backyard in which the body of Mrs. Marie Wolfs, 26, was found today apparently after lying all night in the rain. Police have uncovered no cause, no motive for the death.

JAMES WOLF

Mr. Wolf, 1027 Decatur street, arrested as a material witness in his wife's death.

NEW SPINELLI WITNESS FOUND

Assistant District Attorney George F. P. Langfitt said today that another witness had been found who has identified Guiseppe (Big Mike) Spinelli as the killer of Johnny Volpe, the late racketeer, last summer in Wylie avenue. This new witness' identity is being kept secret, along with that of the blonde girl. Langfitt leaves tonight for Harrisburg and Washington to arrange for the extradition of Spinelli from his native Italy, where he was captured two weeks ago.

Assistant Chief of County Detectives James S. McGinley, who has successfully conducted many legal battles for the extradition of prisoners from other states and countries, was expected to be named today to represent the District Attorney's office in the fight to bring back Spinella. Lieut. Frank Ferris, of the homicide squad, whose three-month investigation resulted in Spinelli's arrest in Italy, will represent the city.

Mrs. McAdoo Gains Following Operation

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, wife of the United States Senator-elect and daughter of the late President Woodrow Wilson, underwent a successful operation yesterday for removal of her appendix. Her condition was reported good.

Hemingway Scorns Film For 'Happy Ending'

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Indignant over the traditional "happy ending" in the screen version of his book "A Farewell to Arms," Ernest Hemingway prepared today to bid farewell to Piggott, Ark., ahead of the arrival of the picture being rushed there for a "world premiere" before him and his friends.

The author had a telephone interview with a newspaper here, in answer to the producers who he declared justified the change by saying he "had in mind a happy ending when he wrote the book." This Hemingway denied.

He quoted from a telegram from the producers saying:

"Two prints unexpectedly available make possible private showing of the motion picture version of 'A Farewell to Arms' to your family and friends at Piggott on the night of the Broadway premiere or before."

Hemingway replied angrily, ordering the producers not to send the prints and expressing the hope that some day a "really great interpretation" of the book might be filmed.

Police Declare War On 'Holiday Crooks'

Police today began their annual drive against pickpockets and shoplifters who prey on Christmas shoppers and stores.

While the department set its snares for known thieves, Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh issued an appeal to shoppers to observe the following rules:

Don't be careless; don't lay purses on counters while selecting merchandise; don't carry large sums of money; don't carry large purses on the arms; don't display large sums of money; don't lay expensive garments down carelessly while being fitted for others; don't carry wallets in hip pockets; avoid crowds if possible, especially at street car stops; in leaving a bank, don't carry money in the hands; don't hesitate to report any loss immediately to police, and advise police when suspicious of any person.

MOONEY ROW STIRS COMMONS

LONDON, Dec. 6.—(INS.)—A demonstration in behalf of Tom Mooney threw the House of Commons into an uproar today.

Two well-dressed men who had gained admission to the strangers' gallery threw leaflets down into the floor of the House and loudly demanded that Mooney's mother be permitted to visit England.

It was the first demonstration ever staged in the British House of Parliament for the convicted radical, whose life sentence for participation in the San Francisco preparedness parade bombing continues to attract wide attention in Europe.

Mrs. Mooney, who is 84, wanted to visit England for three days "to tell the workers about her son's frame-up," the pamphlets said, adding that the government had refused to grant her a visa.

GARNER REPEAL PLAN UPSET BY 'LAME DUCKS'

By ARTHUR HACHTEN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—"Lame Ducks," repudiated by the voters in the November election, caused defeat of Speaker Garner's proposal for prohibition repeal in the House yesterday. The vote, 272 to 144, was only six short of the necessary two-thirds to obtain adoption of a resolution to amend the Constitution.

Eighty-two of the 144 votes in opposition were by "lame ducks." Seventy-one of these were Republicans, 11 Democrats.

BLAME 'LAME DUCKS'

Democratic Leader Rainey, of Illinois, said the "Republican 'lame ducks' defeated the resolution."

Speaker Garner also attributed the defeat to the same course. Defeat of the Garner resolution probably means there will be no legislation affecting the Eighteenth Amendment at this winter's session.

Speaker Garner announced he would not permit another vote on the amendment in the House unless the Senate adopts a resolution calling for outright repeal. The Speaker added he hopes to have a vote on a beer-for-revenue bill before Christmas. The Ways and Means Committee begins public hearings on beer and wine proposals tomorrow.

Shot Halts Escape Of Kidnap Suspect

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Juan Enriquez, said by police to be one of the principal leaders of the gang which kidnaped Jose Maria Riande, 6-year-old son of a prominent merchant, was shot and gravely wounded today by police when he attempted to escape.

Police today were seeking the body of the child on ranches around Medellin. Five of Enriquez' alleged accomplices have been arrested.

BOARD TO PAY TUITION

Members of the Chalfant School Board, whose removal has been sought by borough residents because of alleged negligence in signing a contract with Union High School, Turtle Creek, voted last night to pay the high school $500 owed for last year and $640 due for September tuition, leaving an arrearage of $1,300.

R. R. Schulz, board president, said the directors will confer with their solicitor, Edward Sheinberg, this week regarding their answer to the removal petitions filed in court a week ago by 51 parents of borough students who were excluded from classes at the Union High School because of failure by the school board to pay tuitions. The students were later permitted to return to the high school.

WEALTH RUMOR DENIED BY COX

Father Cox meets many lines of resistance in his work in caring for the needy. He acknowledges that the unfortunates who come under his care have cause for resentment but he doesn't think it fair that some of them should "pick" on him because they are not getting more in the way of help than he can give.

Preceding his sermon at old St. Patrick's Church Sunday morning he told of a letter that had been handed to him in which the writer asserted that Father Cox and Old St. Patrick's are wealthy. Commenting on this statement he said:

"We have had some bank failures, haven't we? You didn't hear of Father Cox or St. Patrick's losing any money in these bank failures, did you? Well, we had or have none to lose."

The Sun-Telegraph has inaugurated a subscription campaign for the benefit of the Father Cox relief fund.

House Vote on Repeal Broadcast to Nation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(Universal.)—Congress had a successful radio audition yesterday and demonstrated the feasibility of conducting its deliberations within the hearing of the nation's listeners from coast to coast. This step having been taken, Hearst Radio Service wil push its four-year-old campaign for the regular broadcasting of congressional proceedings.

For the first time, as ayes and noes resounded through the chamber during the vote on the Garner repeal resolution, the House of Representatives had a gallery that extended throughout the country. The vote was broadcast through microphones hastily installed in the chamber by NBC and CBS.

Installation of broadcasting equipment in both the Senate and House and in the meeting-places of the most important committees of both, and provision for radioing of the more important debates, votes and hearings in the Congress, now awaits formal approval by the rules committees of the two Houses.

The plans of the broadcasters call for the equipping of each senator and representative with a lapel microphone similar to the devices used in the broadcasting of the two national political conventions.

Broadcasters do not plan to air other than the highlights of Congressional sessions, such as debates and votes on treaties, appropriation and other measures of national interest, and hearings in important committees.

Hearst Radio Service's campaign for Congressional broadcasting has been approved by educators and citizen groups as the most important step in the political education of the nation ever proposed. They visualize Congress as meeting within the hearing of homes and schools, enabling every citizen to take a personal interest in the acts of his elected representatives.

CREDIT GROUP ASSAILS TAX

After an address by Arthur C. Kaufmann before the Retail Credit Men's Association in the Fort Pitt Hotel last night, the association adopted resolutions condemning the emergency tax and urging opposition to any plan involving its continuance. The resolution said disadvantages of the tax greatly overcome any advantages.

Mr. Kaufmann, vice president and general manager of McCreery & Company, urged economies in government, declaring the tax problem is on everybody's doorstep. He emphasized that the merchant and public must consider it, adding:

"Politics is getting into business so fast that if you do not get into politics, there may not be any business. Taxes cannot continue to increase. The load is breaking the back of the taxpayer and he cannot pay it."

Kaufmann was introduced by Col. Franklin Blackstone. Vice President John A. Brown presided.

State Senator Morris Einstein sent word to the association that he is opposed to the emergency sales tax.

GUY LOMBARDO TAKES ADVANCE PEEP AT NEW DODGE SIX

New York, N. Y.—Guy Lombardo, personable leader of one of America's most famous dance orchestras, and musical idol of the younger set, deserted his baton today for an advance showing of the new Dodge Six.

"It's a hit!" was the enthusiastic comment of the rhythm king afterwards. And since Mr. Lombardo has been responsible for some of the biggest hits in the song world, his statement may be considered prophetic.

"The new Dodge Six will click with everybody who wants a smart, youthful car that is sporty and smooth. And it's so peppy! It has the zip and go of a snappy fox-trot, combined with the gliding ease of a dreamy waltz. It has everything the public wants—good looks, impressive power, flashing speed and brilliant performance. And when you add to that the amazing value represented by this great car you've got a combination that will take the country by storm."

GUY LOMBARDO

Although details of the new car have not yet been officially released by the Dodge organization, it is known that Dodge is ready to spring a real surprise when the new car is formally presented to the public. According to reports, the new Dodge Six is going to be offered with an astounding array of features, at a radical low price which will completely upset all established standards of automobile value.

DIVORCE DECREE MADE VALID

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 6.—Divorced three months ago and then made man and wife again two weeks ago, when Judge Davis W. Henderson revoked the decree, Mrs. Rose Curry, of Perrysville avenue, Pittsburgh, and Robert Cecil Curry, of Connellsville, again have been legally separated.

The court handed down the final decree today when it was proved that no collusion existed. The ex-wife told the judge that her husband had failed to pay back alimony, but denied that she had been paid for remaining away from a master's hearing.

Before Judge Henderson made a final decree, the husband was compelled to pay $75 for the woman's support.

Mrs. Curry was a nurse in the Connellsville Hospital when Curry met her.

Patterson Soothes Injured Spirits Of Constables

If the tender feelings of Allegheny County's sensitive constables have been bruised by the sharp criticisms by Judge Frank P. Patterson these last few months, that jurist applied a healing ointment today. He said:

"The constables' reports for this quarter (received yesterday) list many violations which have been stopped. The constables, practically to a man, show a disposition to stop law violations."

BOARD OPPOSES ANNEXATION

City Council today had under consideration a resolution from the Board of Public Education asking Council to give $100,000 from the $800,000 welfare relief bond issue to provide food for needy school children.

An excitingly new and novel way To make your Christmas last all day!

The Yuletide Gift Chest

A gift each hour from a sumptuous-looking golden chest lined with gay red! What could be more thrilling? The Gift Chests are displayed and for sale in various parts of the store, and there is a special Yuletide Gift Chest Shop on the Fourth Floor, where we supply everything to carry out this new Christmas idea.

The chests are quite inexpensive—50c and 75c each. Into these you put 10 (or 9 or 8, as you wish) small gifts, individually wrapped, and labeled "open at 9," "open at 10," etc. There is a verse provided, to be placed in the lid, which tells the recipient just how the plan works.

The things may be as expensive or as inexpensive as you wish, but it will be new, different, and fun. You can fill your own chest, or tell us how much you wish to spend, and we'll do the rest. Suggestions are provided here for chests for mother, father, sister, brother, uncle, aunt—and others.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Well, the Sun-Telegraph now has at least two columnists writing by remote control. Mark Hellinger has nothing on me. Of course he's touring Europe while I'm sick in bed; but the principle of the thing is that we're both away from the office contributing our remarks.

Mr. Hellinger tells of the wonders of the Roman night-clubs, while my only personal observations divulge the fact that every time I start to go to sleep, somebody sneaks up on me and says it's time to take another pill. And what an array of bottles and boxes. Yesterday when I wanted a prescription filled someone had to go to the drug store. The tables are turned today. Three druggists have called me up and asked if I would fill their prescription for them. It's a good story even if it isn't true.

* * *

An anonymous writer from Bellevue claims another distinction for Pittsburgh. He promotes Pittsburgh's progress by saying that London fogs are as lightest dew in comparison with the mighty blankets subjected to us Pittsburghers. It seems that our "Work Shop of the World" is doing business under cover so to speak.

* * *

Mrs. F. W. Caldwell sends thanks to the honest person who returned her railroad pass and money when it was left on a street car.—Paging Mr. Diogenes.

* * *

* * *

Mrs. C. M. H. passes this idea on for you folks who want to remember your friends with Christmas cards and find yourselves unable to afford ready-made cards. She purchased one cent government postcards, a 10-cent box of red and green crayons, and a five-cent package of stickers which contained a variety of poinsettias, hollies and stars and totaled 75 in number. In this way she is able to remember all her friends with personal remarks. The Christmas spirit of remembrance is there and even though the frills and fancies are missing the receiver knows that a friend is thinking of him or her.

* * *

As Walt Winchell would put it, there will be some orchids in order for someone. Instead of my answering questions today, I'm going to take the bull by the horns (Signor Don Luis Kaufman—Toreador by appointment). Here's what I want to know. Why are the defeated congressmen of this past election who are now in session at Washington, known as "lame ducks."

* * *

From this comfortable repose I might go on writing but the doctor has just arrived and I can't have him thinking I'm delirious. My over-burdened table can't hold another box of pills. Remember the straw that broke the camel's back.

Seibel Discusses Theater Tonight

George Seibel, literary and dramatic critic of the Sun-Telegraph, discusses news and personalities of the theater when he gives his weekly "Plays and Players" talk from the studios of WCAE at 7 tonight.

Once more Uncle Bob and Betty come to the WCAE microphone to read the Sun-Telegraph comic pages, providing 15 minutes of fun, tonight at 6.

Ted Kaye, pinch-hitting for his brother, Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, who is ill with the grip, broadcasts the latest news flashes over WCAE and WJAS today at 9:05 a. m. and 6:30 p. m. and over WCAE at 2:15 p. m.

'Ship at Sea' Broadcast on WCAE

Maria Jeritza, Viennese soprano and former Metropolitan Opera star, making one of her few radio appearances, is presented as guest soloist during the Five Star Theater program on WJAS tonight from 10 to 10:30.

Mme. Jeritza sings a group of arias from Tchaikowsky's opera, "Jeanne d'Arc;" "The Bird," by Kienzl and "Love's Magic," by Grey, supported by a symphony orchestra under the direction of Joseph Bonime. Jeritza, whose repertoire ranges from the Sieglinde of Wagner's "Ring" operas to the title role in "Bocaccio," has been honored by several composers who have created operas specially for her.

An original "ship at sea" broadcast, conceived, staged and directed by J. P. McEvoy, the "Will Rogers of Broadway," is scheduled to be heard over an extensive NBC-WEAF network, of which WCAE is the Pittsburgh outlet, tonight from 11 to 11:30. The broadcast, originating on board the new Italian Conte di Savoia, sister ship of the Rex, while 18 hours out from New York on its maiden voyage, features talks by officers and prominent passengers and music. McEvoy acts as master of ceremonies.

"The Wreckers," another dramatization of a famous federal criminal case, is the Dance Hour offering on WCAE at 10, with Ferde Grofe and his orchestra providing the rhythms. The story deals with attempts to solve the mystery of the destruction of numerous ships in mid-ocean . . . On the same station at 8, Julia Sanderson sings "Take Me in Your Arms," one of the new songs, and harmonizes with Frank Crumit in "You Were Meant for Me," from the first Charlot's Revue.

THE KDKA Players offer a thrilling one-act play, "The Monkey's Paw," with Claude Morris, Friendly Ford, Alma Lind, Robert Gill and William Bergheimer, Jr., portraying the principal roles, at 7:30.

Andrea Marsh Fooled. Shave or Not to Shave? Wynn Leads in Poll.

Andrea Marsh, the charming young vocalist with Ted Weems' orchestra, is the latest victim of a microphone prank . . . While a guest at dinner the other night, Andrea heard the radio announce, "We will now bring you the music of Ted Weems and his orchestra." She rushed to a telephone and frantically called the CBS studios, her father and Weems, before she realized that her host was responsible for the announcement—made through a microphone linked with the receiving set.

Miss Marsh

Life for Jack Smart, "March of Time" actor, has become just one dull routine of growing mustaches and then shaving them off. The hefty actor recently gave up his first crop to appear as a dancing satyr in the Lambs Gambol. Now that he's restored it, he finds he'll have to remove it again for a movie short in two weeks. Then, late in the spring, he'll repeat the procedure for another stage appearance.

Ed Wynn continues to lead the comedians' division in that Bosch radio star popularity poll. John S. Young heads the announcers; Frank Parker and the Pickens Sisters, the singers; Richard Gordon and Marge Minter tie for actors' popularity; Rudy Vallee is leading the baton-wavers' group; Rubinoff, the instrumentalists, and the Gypsies, miscellaneous programs.

Howard Claney, the announcer, says that his hobby, art, is one of the most profitable. He's already sold several paintings he made in his spare time this year.

A Woman Can't Be Happy If Husband Loves Another

Has she a right to turn to him when she is lonely and penniless, and desperately sorry for her mistake?

But how about the Other Woman whom he has begun to love? Should that other woman step back, give up her dream of happiness? Or should she fight?

If you were the ex-wife, or if you were the Other Woman, what would you do?

Dear Sally:

I guess you will think this is a peculiar problem that I am bringing you, but I wish you would help me get the right of it.

About a year and a half ago I met a fine, intelligent man, and we began going out together. For eight months we have been engaged. I knew that he had been married before, because he told me not so long after we met. He had been divorced for several years and was pretty bitter about it, because, in spite of everything he could do for his ex-wife, she was never satisfied and finally left him.

I love him and have looked forward to making him happy. We get along wonderfully together, and had planned on being married sometime about the first of the year.

Well, the other day he met his ex-wife again. She was alone, unhappy—and broke.

And now he tells me that he thinks we should quit; that because she is down, and doesn't know how to get by, he should try to patch things up with her, because she "was once his wife" and he "can't see her go to wreck and ruin."

THINKS IT IS HIS DUTY

It isn't that he still loves her. He doesn't. He is very unhappy over it all. But he seems to think it is his duty; that he is somehow responsible for what happens to her, in spite of the way things went with their marriage.

Do you believe that?

I don't mind him helping her until she can get on her feet, as he would any friend; but I can't see why he should feel bound to try to patch her up by marrying her again.

Please help me. What shall I do? Shall I try to hold him? I love him, and I know he loves me. I am sure I can persuade him to give up his idea, but when I think about it, I wonder—is he right? And am I wrong when I think that he doesn't owe her his life, now that things have gone badly with her?

Have I the right to hang on; to keep him if I can?

If I do hang on and keep him, will we be unhappy because he will look back and still feel that he should have "rescued" her?

ALICE.

Shall you fight for your happiness?

What do you mean by fighting? Do you mean beating down the man's arguments, cajoling or threatening him into marrying you against his own conviction? If that's what you mean, let me give you a word of warning, sister.

DOUBTS MAN

You'll never be happy with a man who secretly feels that either his love or his duty lies elsewhere.

After all, Alice, this problem isn't really up to you. It's up to the man. It's his life, and he alone can decide what to do with that life.

Frankly, I doubt if he is drawn to his ex-wife by a "sense of duty." Excuses like that listen lovely, but healthy human nature rarely functions along those lines. He performed his duty to her once, and failed. He decided then that duty didn't pay, and he left.

If he is drawn to her again, it is by something stronger, more compelling than a sense of duty. He is drawn by a love which he is unable to forget. And the worst bet on earth, sister, is a husband with a love hang-over.

Yes, I agree with you that he'll probably be miserable if he goes back to her. But that's his bad luck. And if you're a wise girl, you won't mix in it. Let him make his own decision. Insist that he does so. Then, if he decides to stay with you, you'll be everlastingly sure that it is you whom he really prefers. If you don't you'll be haunted by bitter uncertainty all your life.

By FAY KING

Those born between November 22 and December 21 are remarkable persons.

They have great insight, and are rarely deceived by anyone or anything.

Independence is another of their traits. Don't try to boss a Sagittarius born; it can't be done. But they lead well.

Ask their advice and they give it so honestly you may be offended if you prefer flattery.

They are the truest of friends, and no one can turn them from you while they know you to be worthy. But once lose their esteem and you can never regain their confidence.

They are generous, but not extravagant.

If you would please a Sagittarius born you must be loyal and dependable. They can read you like a book and abhor deceit.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Food-Poisoning Should Not Be Treated Lightly

Many persons use the term "ptomaine poisoning," when in reality they are referring to food poisoning. Ptomaine poisoning is an expression rapidly disappearing from scientific literature.

Dr. Copeland

Food poisoning may be traced to germs in contaminated food. The germs liberate poisons or "toxins" which are detrimental to the body. Food poisoning, so called, is caused by swallowing these toxins.

The signs of trouble vary from slight nausea and headache, to severe vomiting, abdominal pain and extreme prostration. Some cases of food poisoning are extremely dangerous.

It is probable there will be more and more reduction in the number of cases of food poisoning. Modern refrigeration, rapid transportation and other facilities that aid in keeping food fresh, are doing away with the danger. There is apt to be trouble if the food is handled too much or is permitted to stand around after cooking.

Some foods are more likely to deteriorate than others. We should guard against this danger and thus prevent food poisoning. I should warn you that it is a mistake to keep cream soups and cream sauces until they grow stale and germ-laden. When these foods are kept for days, they make beautiful breeding places for germs, some of which may be dangerous. Be careful of cream soups and sauces, cream-filled desserts and prepared foods containing gelatine unless you are sure of their freshness. They are very desirable and wholesome when fresh.

When eating in a strange restaurant it is advisable to choose such foods as roast beef, potatoes, bread and butter, fruit, coffee and tea. These foods are the least dangerous and rarely harbor germs that cause food poisoning.

Too often mild cases of food poisoning are treated lightly. If you recover quickly you are indeed fortunate, but your neighbor may be less fortunate.

All cases of food poisoning should be reported to the health authorities so that the source of poisoning may be found. Immediate recognition that the trouble is due to food poisoning, will save others from unnecessary suffering.

Nausea and vomiting are not always due to food poisoning, of course. They may be danger signals, pointing to some inflammation of the stomach, gall bladder or intestine. Such symptoms may be the forerunner of appendicitis. Whenever in doubt, call your physician.

Answers to Health Queries

B. F. Q.—What should a girl of 15, 5 feet 6 inches tall weigh? 2—How can I reduce?

A.—She should weigh about 124 pounds. This is about the average weight for one of this age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance. 2—Eat very sparingly of starches and sugars. Send self-addressed stamped envelope for full particulars.

Household Hints

Remember when cooking prunes or any other dried fruit, that less sugar will be necessary if the fruit is cooked first and the sweetening added as they are taken off the stove. Golden syrup instead of sugar makes the juice much nicer.

Keep your eye on the drip pan or drain under the refrigerator, for roaches are very fond of such places.

Take care that the vegetable has not been washed to give it a fresh appearance. Avoid dampness around it. Beets should be caked a bit with dirt showing that they have not been handled a great deal. We also expect spinach to be a bit dirty. Carrots should be firm and small. Onions should be hard and devoid of brown spots. Squash and cabbage should be hard, firm and white. Cauliflower should be perfectly white, without any rubbed-off brown spots.

Madge and Lillian Start Searching Country Roads

Lillian, Ronald, Mary and I stole out of the side door and took seats in the car that Ronald had brought down. His addition to our party had changed Lillian's plan that I should drive.

"You drive, Ronald," she said as we came up to the car, "and Mary, you sit in the front seat with him. Madge, you and I will sit in the rumble seat, each watching one side of the road."

She was like a commanding officer, and I rejoiced that she could so lose herself in action. Thanks to Dr. Barnes' directions and Ronald's knowledge of the village we soon reached the section of the road where Rose's neighbor said a car had met the girls.

"It's hopeless to look for tire tracks along this well-traveled road," Lillian said, "even if we knew what kind of car it was into which the girls climbed. We'll know that by the time Brock gets through talking to this neighbor of Rose's, but at this time all we can do is to go slowly along the road we select, looking on both sides of it in the forlorn hope that we may see something."

At the first road branching from the main one, Ronald halted the car at a word from Lillian, and she bent her head with mine over the maps we had brought with us.

"This road is a fairly direct one leading to another town," she said, "and Mrs. Barnes says the smaller roads leading from it are quite thickly dotted with farmhouses. I think we'll leave that until later, or let the others take it. Go on to the next one."

At the second turn she again stopped, consulted the maps, and decided upon turning into the narrower road.

"A little way above this, you see, is another branch road," she said, "and still further along that one another branches off. It's lonelier territory in there, too. I may be wrong, but I have a hunch that there is where he turned."

Something in her confidence made my pulses beat faster.

"Wouldn't the girls suspect something if he turned off on this road?" I asked.

"He probably told them he was taking a short cut across," she said, "but if he kept turning into wilder country, they would realize something was wrong; and then, if I know Marion, she would begin to figure out a plan to circumvent him."

We drove along the second road, past farmhouses not yet aroused to even the early activity of a rural community, and then turned again at Lillian's direction into a winding, narrow road, the approach to which was so heavily wooded that it was hidden from even the nearest farmhouse.

"Now keep your eyes open," Lillian said, as Ronald obeyed her command to drive into the road. "Drive very slowly, Ronald, and stop about two miles up, if it goes that far."

She consulted her wrist watch and made a mental calculation.

"We have to get back by nine o'clock," she said, "but we can do it, if we do not waste time. When you get two miles up, Ronald, turn the car and follow us very slowly. Madge and Mary and I will walk back, going over this roadside with a fine tooth comb."

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

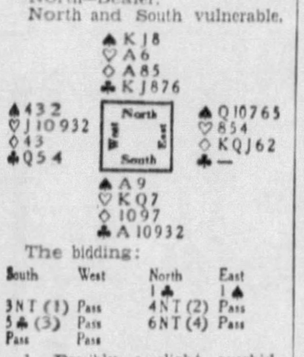
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Simple End-Play

End-plays and squeezes are the stock in trade of expert players, by which they make contracts that appear on the face of them to be impossible. Through an understanding of their use, losing finesses can frequently be avoided, although an average player may see only a situation in which a finesse must win if the contract is to be realized. Actually, every player should know a great deal about finesses, but the most important thing to know about a finesse is never to take it if there is another satisfactory way to play the hand, and to resort to the finesses only when it is the one method of winning the necessary tricks. Of course, when a suit has been bid in which a finesse must apparently be taken, and that finesse is a marked loser because of the bid, then even the novice will avoid it, if possible.

Recently I watched a hand played at Crockford's Club, New York, where a contract was made by a simple end-play, although the hand could also have been made by means of the Vienna Coup. The hand is such a good illustration of the end-play situation that I give it below:

North—Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
		1 ♣	1 ♠
3 N T (1)	Pass	4 N T (2)	Pass
5 ♣ (3)	Pass	6 N T (4)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Possibly a slight overbid, but South fears that five clubs may be too high a contract and is unwilling to play the hand below game.

2—With 4 honor-tricks and a certain stopper in the adversely bid suit, North's Slam try is entirely justified.

3—South is by no means certain of the Slam, but, inasmuch as the contract has passed the game range of notrump, now shows ability to play the hand at clubs.

4—Reading South's Jump bid in notrump and later support for the clubs as assuring the solidity of that suit, North now bids for Slam at notrump in order to avoid the remote possibility of a first-round ruff of the spade suit.

West chose his top spade as the Opening lead, in response to his partner's bid. While on the bidding it was probable that the short diamond would be a better lead, actually no play could defeat the contract. The 8 was played from Dummy, East played the Ten, and South won with the Ace. South decided that on the bidding East must be placed with the missing honors in diamonds, as the spade suit was very weak, and probably held either no clubs or not more than one. Therefore, the next play was a low heart to the Ace in Dummy in order to make the play of the club suit as easy as possible. The club 6 was then led from Dummy, upon which East discarded the diamond 6. The trick was won with the Ace, the established finesse in the suit taken, and the remaining club tricks cashed. East, of course, was in tremendous difficulties on his discards.

He was compelled to retain the Queen-seven of spades, and on the five club and two heart tricks, which followed, was forced to discard five times. This forced him to bare his hand down to the King-Queen of diamonds and the Queen-seven of spades. South, who now had a perfect count on his hand, cashed the Ace of diamonds and put East in the lead with the Queen of diamonds, forcing him at the end to lead up to the King-Knaves of spades in Dummy.

Actually, South had other methods of playing his cards. The diamond Opening, which was suggested as the best lead, would have required different handling. The first diamond trick would have been permitted to hold in order that the squeeze might operate. If the diamond suit had been continued, the Ace would have won the second trick, the Ace of spades would have been cashed, followed by the running of the clubs and hearts, and East would have been squeezed between the diamonds and the diamonds and the spade protection.

Today's Question

♠ 10 9 7 6 4 ♡ K 9 6 3 ◇ 5 ♣ A 4 2

Answer: Two spades. This hand definitely warrants some bid in view of the honor strength and distribution, and the shaded spade Takeout is the best bid that the hand offers.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Necessary Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—The young man with whom I have been going out occasionally has invited me to dinner at his sister's home. I remember meeting his sister three or four years ago, but as that is such a long time, I hardly know what to say when meeting her again. Will you please advise me?

2—What shall I say when leaving?

3—She has three children. Shall I take them a box of candy or some little gift? D.

1—I hope that an invitation came, too, from his sister, for it wouldn't be good taste for you to accept this young man's invitation unless you are also invited by the sister, who is the hostess. If the sister hasn't invited you herself, it's a very easy matter to have this adjusted. Just intimate to the young man, "I'd love to go if your sister tells me she would like to have me come" . . . or something like this. Then the young man relays this message to his sister, and she will either write to you or telephone to you. This really should be done, and everyone concerned will respect you for suggesting this necessary mode of invitation. Don't be embarrassed at having to do this . . . it often, very often, has to be done, and it's really a very simple matter.

Then when you do go to the sister's home to dine, say, as you greet her, "It is such a pleasure to see you again, Mrs. Adams. And you were so kind to ask me to come."

2—Say as you leave, something like this, "Good night, Mrs. Adams. I've had such a happy time being with you and your family. Thank you so much for asking me to come."

3—It would be most gracious of you to take the children a box of candy.

Pitt Dean Urges New Study System

Faculty members of the University of Pittsburgh were urged by L. P. Sieg, dean of philosophy, to formulate a Pittsburgh philosophy of education to enable a student to educate himself by analyzing and experimenting with his own problems. Sieg said lectures, notes and assigned readings given by faculty members under the threat of a future examination do not give the college student an honest education unless the student has the chance to attach his studies to his own life.

Although this transposition cipher was the simplest we have printed so far, few correct solutions have been received up to the time of going to press. Maybe it was too easy. It was a simple transposition cipher depending on the proper arrangement of the message. The message reads:

To Brooks Battery C from Simeon Battalion HQ at two twenty elevate range to rake section of Monville Targon road located in square six eighteen between hills forty-seven and thirty.

Those folks who have experienced so much trouble with Cipher No. 19—the solution of which is published today—will be pleased with today's new one.

It is of the simplest type and even a beginner should be able to decipher it within 15 minutes.

As a hint—it is another of the sort which gave considerable brain exercise to solvers some time ago. More hints will be published Monday—if you need them.

How long will YOU need to do this one? Write and let the Cipher Editor know.

A solution to the "Artillery Fire Order" appears today. Did YOU complete it within an hour. If so, you should get into the Signal Corps of the Army in the next war—if any. They can use you.

From the postman come several letters from cipher fans in Western Pennsylvania and neighboring states. Among the fans are J. Fred Irion, of Leetsdale; James A. R. Pith, of Oil City, Pa., a regular decipherer, if you please; H. H. Woods, of 432 Bakewell Building; Milton T. Pickles, of Ambridge; W. J. Hastings, of Coraopolis, and George R. Lang, of 6015 Walnut street, who signs himself a "member of the American Cryptogram Association."

Other fans sending original ciphers include Frank C. Gennery, of Fairmont, W. Va.; Ralph W. Stewart, of 2700 Broadway, and Julian J. Miller, of Jeannette, Pa.

Muriel's Palm Beach Playhouse Closed

PALM BEACH, Fla., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Winter residents of Palm Beach will have to do without stage productions this season—that is, in so far as they may have been depending on the Palm Beach Playhouse.

Mrs. Elisha Ryer Hubbard, the former Muriel McCormick, socially prominent president and founder of the Playhouse, has announced that existing conditions make it necessary to refrain from opening the theater here this winter.

COLDS GO THROUGH 3 STAGES!

And They are Far Easier Stopped in the First than in the Second or Third!

A cold ordinarily passes through three stages—the Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage. Relief is twice as easy in the first stage.

For prompt relief take a couple of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine immediately upon catching cold. This will usually expel the cold overnight and thus prevent the spread of the infection within your system.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is effective because it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels. Kills the cold germs and fever in the system. Relieves the headache and grippy feeling. Tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is absolutely safe to take. Contains no narcotics and produces no bad after-effects. It is regarded the world over as the standard cold tablet. Comes in handy, pocket-size box, cellophane-wrapped. For sale in every drug store in America. Make it your first-aid in all cases of colds and grippe. Accept no substitutes.

Forum Proposed At Darrow Debate

Next Monday night's audience at the Darrow-Musmanno debate on immortality may have an opportunity to jibe in with a few questions and perhaps some individual opinions.

Such wide interest has developed in the verbal encounter between Judge M. A. Musmanno, affirmative, and Clarence Darrow, negative, that these speakers are being asked to approve a plan for an open forum, following their 100 minutes of main arguments and rebuttals on the question, "Does Man Live Again?"

O'MALLEY RAPS COUNTY HEADS

Pat O'Malley, the Strip's chairman of the Second Ward, had a few things to say today about Col. C. C. (Buck) McGovern and Cadwalader M. Barr, the County Commissioners.

Pat didn't like, to say the least, McGovern's recent blast against members of election boards who delay reporting returns. Said Pat, in a letter to the newspapers:

"It sounds like a rave when a high official talks about putting election boards in jail for not making election returns until they are completed.

"Branding election officials thieves and threatening them with death is loose talk, but it makes it harder to get people to serve on election boards. . . .

"The job of head man is too much for him (McGovern). He showed up better as a back-seat driver, and Cad Barr is proving to be a used spare tire."

COUNTY SCHOOL HEADS TO MEET

The forty-fourth annual convention of the school directors of Allegheny County will be held in the Chamber of Commerce Saturda, when 600 educators of the county will discuss school finance and larger units of education. The principal speaker will be Dr. James N. Rule, of Harrisburg, state superintendent of public instruction.

West End Board Backs Rate Fight

A letter has been received by City Council from the West End Board of Trade which says it is in accord with the protest filed with the Public Service Commission by Mt. Lebanon Township against rates charged by the South Pittsburgh Water Company. The board says the rates are excessive.

ESSAY PRIZES TO BE GIVEN

President John S. Herron of City Council, will award prizes to the 400 winners in the Better Traffic Committee's Sixth Annual Traffic Essay Contest Friday evening at Syria Mosque. Eighty thousand public and parochial school children took part in the contest. Scholarships will be presented to five senior high school students by representatives of the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Duquesne University, Pennsylvania College for Women and Mt. Mercy College.

Oil and Gas Tax Protest Meet Set

POSTAL WAGE CUT URGED BY BROWN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—A reduction of postal expenditures "in general and the wage account in particular," rather than further rate increases to balance the postal budget, was recommended to President Hoover today by Postmaster General Brown.

In his annual report, Brown said "normal revenues can be restored only by a return of normal business activity," and continued:

"In the meantime, efforts to eliminate or reduce the present unprecedented postal deficit must necessarily be concentrated upon a reduction of postal expenditures in general and the wage account in particular.

"In the Postmaster General's judgment, resort should not be had to further rate increases as a means of balancing the postal budget."

Brown estimated a gross revenue deficiency of $135,000,000 for the current fiscal year, and a net postal deficit of about $80,000,000 after allowing for non-postal expenditures and "services rendered without charge to other governmental agencies."

He attributed "the present disappointing volume" of business to "the continued commercial stagnation," but said the higher letter postage rate had resulted in a diminished use of the mails by companies sending out bills.

A return to a 2-cent rate for local letters was recommended. Brown said, contending a loss of revenue "is believed to be justified" because of the lower cost of this service and the widespread public convenience which will result."

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

Society folks had a grand get-together in the foyer of the Nixon last night during the intermissions of the Theater Guild's grand comedy, "Biography," which smacked a bit, did you notice, of Claire Sheridan's "Naked Truth"?

From Sewickley came two debutantes, both named Nancy—Nancy Doyle and Nancy Byers. Both girls wore black velvet and white fur wraps. Another deb I had a glimpse of in the jammed lobby was petite Laura Oliver, who chose a demure frock of white crepe having a band of mink bordering her cape collar.

Vivacious Katharine Frazer, one of the most popular sub-debs, was chatting with a group of friends, and I noticed Eloise Dorrance in black velvet.

One of the most interesting gowns was that of Mrs. John E. McKelvey—it was of vivid green crepe, having straps, suspender style, in the back, and a jaunty cape of the same material.

Wears Purple

Chatting together were Mrs. Harvey Childs III, Mrs. A. Rex Flinn, in green satin, and Mrs. Alan Magee Scaife, who was in one of the smartest gowns there. It was of black crepe having long sleeves, with the puff above the elbow of slashed cloth of silver. Cloth of silver fashioned the girdle, too, of this simple, chic gown.

Mrs. W. Edgar Reed, Mrs. Harry J. Miller, Mrs. Raymond Hilliard in black velvet, Mrs. F. G. Blackburn in sapphire blue crepe with blue velvet cartridge pleating outlining the deep arm-holes, and Mrs. Frederick Gwinner III, and Mrs. W. Terrell Johnson, in white crepe, I noticed.

Among the late-comers were Genevieve Bell, Mrs. George A. Kelly III, Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby in an enchanting frock of black satin with a bodice of white, having crisscross straps in back.

Mrs. Frank S. Love chose a gown of black satin with a cerise red velvet wrap.

Mrs. H. D. Williams was there; Helen MacCloskey, Caroline Mitchell in gold yellow pebble crepe with bands of sable ending the brief sleeves; Mrs. Charles Flaccus in white crepe, Mrs. George Wittmer III, in pale blue lace; Mrs. Gordon Fisher, Jr., in black crepe, and Mrs. E. Farley Walton, Mrs. Blair Childs, Mrs. J. O. Burgwin, Mrs. B. F. Jones, Jr., Madeleine McClintock and Mrs. Mortimer Miller.

And Madelaine Alexander, in black velvet with a smart long wrap of bay-green velvet, I saw, and her mother, Mrs. Maitland Alexander, Mrs. F. C. Irish, Mrs. Judson Brooks and Mrs. John M. Roberts, in black chiffon velvet and a leopard coat.

Pittsburgh Folk Sojourning in Southland

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 6.—With the influx of tourist arrivals since Armistice Day rapidly filling up hotels and apartment houses, information bureau officials have revised earlier estimates and now predict that registrations will will exceed those of 1928, the last pre-depression year.

September 1 an estimate for the St. Petersburg Hotel Men's Association set the 1932-33 season registration at 31,000, about 3,000 more than last year. November 1, this prediction was revised to 35,000, and this week the experts stated that if the present rate of increase continues, there will be 40,000 names on the tourist books before March 31.

New York, represented by 2,000 arrivals, leads Pennsylvania, the next state, by about two to one. Of all those registered, approximately 25 per cent are visiting Florida for the first time.

Among those registering from Pittsburgh during the past week were Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Cox and A. J. Cox, Jr., Ben Avon; Miss Mary Gilchrist, Harry and James O. Gilchrist, 5758 Baum boulevard; Mrs. Minnie G. Gisin, Avalon; Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Snyder, 1822 Morrell street; Arch J. Straub, 1137 Washington boulevard; George M. Weaver, 2732 Orleans street; Mrs. Richard Wenzel, Miss Hilda Wenzel and Richard Wenzel, Jr., Brownsville road.

Athletic Week To Be Held At Pitt

An intensive program to get every woman on the University of Pittsburgh campus to go in for some form of athletic competition will be emphasized next week under the auspices of the annual Women's Athletic Association week. A winter carnival will be held at Heinz House Monday for all Pitt women. Admission for each person will be a toy, all of which will later be distributed to Pittsburgh's poor children for Christmas.

"The Three Wise Men" in the form of a musical dialogue will be given at the annual Yuletide Festival of the University of Pittsburgh this year at the Hotel Schenley. The cast has been chosen with Miss Charlotte Walker named to play the leading role, that of the Virgin Mary.

The play, a shepherd interlude, was translated from the German by Dr. John F. Raschen, head of the department of modern languages.

Following the presentation of the play, there will be a Yuletide dance at the Schenley.

Talk on Chinese Drama Given at Press Club

Like drama in other countries, Chinese drama had its beginning in religious celebrations, Samuel Kwok Ying Fung told the Women's Press Club yesterday at the meeting in the Woman's City Club. Their drama had made no intellectual contribution to the Chinese people, but had great and enduring popularity, he said. At the conclusion of his talk, Mr. Fung answered questions concerning the Sino-Japanese situation and then read an original play.

Miss Anna Jane Phillips, Miss Margaret Russell and Miss Ethel Danforth were admitted to active membership in the club.

20th Century Told Of Russian Art By Avinoff

When Dr. Andrey Avinoff, director of Carnegie Museum, addressed the Twentieth Century Club yesterday, he used an amplifier, an example that might profitably be followed by other speakers. Dr. Avinoff, speaking on "Russian Art and Architecture," said Russia is the melting pot of art, for there one finds the influence of the Orient, the classic Greek, the Egyptian, Persian and Scythian.

Its pictorial art has been a less important contribution to national development than has Russian music and literature, Dr. Avinoff stated. Among the slides he showed in illustration of his talk was one of his own home in Russia which has been demolished since "the avalanche of horrors," the term by which he spoke of Bolshevism. The trend in Russian art is changing, the speaker stated, and the best that may be said of it now is that it shows what ought not to be done.

Handicraft Mart New Venture Sponsored By College Club

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The College Club, home of constant surprises, is introducing another innovation—the Handicraft Mart, which is to be a combination handcraft exchange and shop. It is under auspices of the special activities committee, with Mrs. Karl C. Randall as chairman and is to be open Tuesdays and Fridays in the old building from 9 until 6 o'clock.

According to Mrs. Randall, no old English mart down a side street in London could show a more varied display of hand-fashioned articles. And certainly no shop anywhere could exhibit more expert workmanship. Woven bags and runners in linen or wool, coverlids of quaint patterns, hand-pieced quilts, nursery pillows, pottery, hand-made brass, painted metal and wooden trays and tables, dressed dolls, hooked rugs and lovely children's wear.

Not only do the products run to the needle arts. There are arts of the spoon and pan—breads, rolls, cakes, pies, real southern beaten biscuit, marmalades, jams and jellies, some of these put up in containers especially designed for holiday gifts. Also with a special thought for the season are jars of mincemeat and cookies, and, of all things, white fruit cake—ever hear of it?

The mart will be formally opened on Friday, although it is open today for display and orders.

NEW TENDENCY IN COLOR SCHEME NOTED IN LATEST PARIS MODELS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—One of the noticeable differences between American and French designing is in the use of color combinations. Those who keep out a weather eye for not only what Paris is doing by way of color, but what Paris is going to do next season or six months hence, will notice a definite tendency—one which is in keeping with the general French plan of designing—towards careful subordination of bright color to black or neutral tones.

* * *

THERE IS an excellent example of this tendency in the Fauvety costume ensemble in today's sketch. It makes use of a current favorite trio of colors—black, white and red. The coat is entirely black—a thick, wooly eponge which is warm without being heavy. It is marked with visible stitching, which is black, and clip fastenings which are also black. Beneath is a red dress—red wool, topped with a yoke of knitted fabric, also red. The only touches of white are around the base of the throat—a little knitted collar and small white rings used to fasten the three tabs at the diagonal closing.

* * *

WHERE THE color is carefully concentrated in this costume, by the French, an American version would use all three colors in each costume—and in the accompanying hat as well. The influence of American clients in French dressmaking houses often results in French designs with an American background; whereas the purely French costume usually avoids carefully any even mixing of colors.

LANG PROPOSES MERGER TO CUT BUDGET

Gene Tunney Tells Story of His Life

GENE TUNNEY IN HIS EARLY FIGHTING DAYS . . . YEARS AGO

Retired Champion Tells Of His First Experience With Professional Boxer

In the first installment, the author described his theories of boxing styles and slugging; and then his early school days when he took to athletics and engaged in pier "scraps" with other boy battlers who used the Hudson River as their swimmin' hole . . . Gene was overjoyed with his pair of boxing gloves, a present from his father on his tenth birthday.

By GENE TUNNEY

CHAPTER II.

My first boxing idol was Jack Goodman, a very good West Side lightweight. He lived on the same street as I did, Perry—only a few doors away, in Greenwich Village. Though he met all the topnotchers of his class, he had no marks of his profession and was referred to as "Handsome Jack, the idol of the West Side."

I knew when Jack took his meals and I often waited outside his door to follow him through the streets, at a safe distance, to admire his snappy, short-stride gait.

Later, another lightweight boxer developed in our neighborhood, Tommy Maloney. Tommy was the kind they called "a good boy." Every Sunday morning he swaggered down through Washington street to Christopher and up the center aisle of St. Veronica's Church with his mother. He never missed a step. Yet, for some reason, we looked upon Tommy as a usurper, who was trying to steal the position of his superior. Eventually, Tommy and Jack met. Jack knocked out Tommy in two rounds. I know of one bonfire that burned that night!

FIRST JOB

At the age of 15, with an elementary school education and a course in business training, I decided that my education was sufficient for me to go out and conquer the industrial world. I got my first job, with the Ocean Steamship Company. In writing the letter of application I closed with "and, dear sir, believe me to be your most obedient servant." The letter is still on file with the Ocean Steamship Company.

I started as an office boy. My salary was the large sum of $5 a week. At the end of the first year I was getting $11 with the title of mail clerk—with great responsibilities, so I thought. After a year in the office I discovered that, while I had the natural qualifications to justify my rapid promotion thus far, the probabilities were that I would not go much farther unless I did something about it. With another young man, I took a joint correspondence-school course in mathematics and English. I am afraid that my algebra and plane geometry were not of much assistance in the office nor have they been since, with one exception. The axiom "the shortest distance between two given points is a straight line" I applied later most beneficially to boxing. From the moment I first studied boxing I insisted on applying this principle.

Along about the time I was 16 there was a young adventurer, Willie Ward, from our street, who started professional boxing as a career. He had several preliminary matches in which he was successful, winning most of them by the knockout route. He asked me to come over to the back of Dave Bernstein's drug store to help him train for one of these matches. This I did without great trepidation, for, while Willie was a year or so older, I always had been able to whip him in our earlier boxing bouts on the sidewalks and in the back yards. I became interested in Willie's career. We soon discovered that the space between the medicine shelves in Bernstein's back room, where he prepared prescriptions, was not large enough for training quarters. Upon inquiry we found out that we

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 6.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Europe turned out a movie called "Congress Dances" and it pleased everybody. Our Congress met yesterday and pleased nobody. Forty-six Democrats, mostly lame ducks, were the villains. In November the country went overwhelmingly wet. But 98 Republicans and 46 Democrats figured that the country didn't Will Rogers know what it wanted. So that means an extra session of Congress.

Regardless of what your opinion is on this subject, when you absolutely know that it will eventually pass, then purposely hold it up and cost the government all this money, then you are a "lame duck," but not in the leg.

Yours, WILL.

WELFARE FUND SPURS FINAL DRIVE

$333,000 Goal Here For Workers as End Nears

Volunteer workers in the Welfare Fund campaign were staging a last minute rally today in a stupendous effort to reach their goal of approximately $2,500,000.

As they began work this morning a total of $333,163 was to be raised.

Success or failure of the campaign was placed upon the citizens in a statement issued by William P. Witherow, general chairman. He said:

"If the campaign fails it will be because people who could have given have not given. If everyone does his share, we will reach the goal."

PLEDGE REQUEST

Individuals who have not yet made their subscriptions were urged to send pledges immediately to the Welfare Fund, 702 Chamber of Commerce Building.

Meanwhile, reports from neighborhoods and employe groups continued to trickle in. The total to date stands at $2,146,997.

Employes of the Troop Water Heater Company report 100 per cent participation. The Travelers Insurance Company reports 72 subscriptions for a total of $396. This is an average of $5.50 per pledge. The National Biscuit Company turned in its subscription of $500. This is a contribution from the corporation.

GROUP PASSES QUOTA

District 9 in the employe division, under Dr. L. B. Bernstein, chairman, has passed its quota with a total raised of $82,243. This district covers public employes, hospitals, schools, universities and social agency employes.

Wednesday's report meeting is the final meeting after a two weeks' extension of the campaign period. If Allegheny County reaches its goal of $2,500,000 it will be an outstanding achievement for this community, campaign leaders stated.

With announcement that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has left the initiative with the State Legislature to meet relief needs after December 31, importance of raising the full amount of the Welfare Fund budget from private contributions was made doubly evident. Continuance of welfare agency programs would be more vital than ever, should another relief crisis threaten Allegheny County.

Drama on a Rain-Washed Mountain: An Operation

HOW SURGEONS JOHNSON AND STEELE, IN HUNTING TOGS, OPERATED WITH A RAZOR IN A STORM-RATTLED MOUNTAIN HUT

Drs. Steele and Johnson, Allegheny General Hospital surgeons bogged down on a mountain hunting trip, pen-pictured as they succored an ill mountaineer in the tiny cabin in which by mere chance they took refuge. They slipped off heavy hunting clothes, operated at once with a straight razor their single scalpel, moonshine whisky their only antiseptic, torn strips of coarse sugar bags their few available dressing. The Sun-Telegraph's Artist Robert F. Reamy has made this picture of that dramatic scene.

6-HOUR BATTLE FOR LIFE FAILS

The six-hour battle of Wilkinsburg firemen to resuscitate Ellsworth E. Clark, 55, of 111 Harlow street, Edgewood, who was overcome by carbon monoxide gas while working on his automobile in his garage proved futile when he succumbed to the effects of the gas last night.

Clark, a tool designer at Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, out of work for a month, was overhauling his car with the motor running. He was found unconscious by his wife.

Dr. R. W. Ebe, who pronounced Clark dead, said both garage doors were open, but that the victim had been working close to the exhaust.

Operate With Old Razor And 'Moonie' Antiseptic

Two Pittsburgh surgeons, bound on a grouse hunt, were driving through a blinding rainstorm on a lonely mountain road above Du Bois, Pa. Their car slipped off a small culvert and was mired in the road.

A shabby mountain hut stood off the road, an oil light blinking from it. Dr. Paul B. Steele, orthopedic surgeon, waded through the mud and rain to the door to seek help. He was followed by Dr. Lloyd W. Johnson, surgeon also, and both on the staff of Allegheny General Hospital.

On a shabby bunk they found J. J. Smith, former oil driller, of Greensburg and Texas. His wife was nearby. His knee and leg were swollen. He was seriously ill from an acute infection. There had been no funds—the shack was the pair's escape from unemployment.

Today the story, like a page torn from the book of the pioneers, was told by friends and colleagues of the two Pittsburgh physicians.

The visitors told the man they were surgeons, and Dr. Steele suggested an immediate operation. Unquestioning, the man agreed. He said they had neither means nor transportation for hospital care. He had been unable to move for nearly a week.

The woman obtained an old straight razor, and it became the scalpel. There was corn whisky, "mountain dew," to sterilize the instrument and the wound. Sugar bags supplied the only available cloth for bandages. While Dr. Steele operated with the razor, Dr. Johnson assisted with the "moonshine antiseptic" and the bandages.

The storm, and the early hour—it was nearly 3 a. m.—and the mired automobile made further attempts to locate the hunting camp of Judge J. Frank Graff, of Kittanning, impossible. The emergency operation over, the man and wife offered the doctors rest in an upper bunk, and the man suggested that to repay them, Mrs. Smith sing. She took out an old ukelele, as battered as the shack, and sang songs of her native Texas. In the morning she helped them get their car on the road.

Colleagues today said the physicians were returning to the mountains to hunt again—and also to see the patient.

G. O. P. Refuses Patent Liquid Nourishment

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Well, they came close to making the Eighteenth Amendment look like a self-addressed envelope.

It hung like a spider to six gossamer votes. Yesterday was egg and sherry day. We got the egg.

Vote was so close they had to call in a bank examiner to look over the books. They even went into the cloakroom to see if any Congressman had checked himself with his hat and coat.

Matter was so important that they voted on it before reading the President's message. They were afraid the wets would vote the messenger boy.

LOSES FLOATING 'GLORY BARN'

The two barges purchased in Pittsburgh for construction of a floating "Glory Barn" by the Rev. John W. Sproul, former Pittsburgh evangelist, have been repossessed by the owner and are being towed back to the city today, according to word from Fairmont, W. Va.

Charles Zubik, Allegheny River houseboat resident, who said he sold the barges to the evangelist, has repossessed them for non-payment, he claims. The floating "Glory Barn" was being built at Fairmont, for use in the Monongahela River.

Philadelphia Cuts Budget $1,000,000

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Slashes of more than $1,000,000 in city and county budget estimates for next year and filing of a court action to force the city to pay the November 15 salaries of its employes held the spotlight today in Philadelphia's financial theater.

City Council, renewing its struggle to eliminate a $20,000,000 deficit and avert a tax rise, voted to sell all city-owned automobiles used by departmental directors. More than $4,800,000 has been slashed to date.

DIRECTOR AIMS TO COMBINE 3 BUREAUS

Council Hears Offer To Slash Estimate $380,287

Public Works Director Edward G. Lang today proposed the merger of three bureaus into one and transfer of another bureau to the Controller's office as a means of trimming the $25,000,000 budget.

Lang offered revised slashes of $830,287 and said he hoped there would be more.

His plan is to eliminate the Bureaus of Highways and Sewers, Light, City Property and Tests and substitution of a new unit to be known as the Bureau of Maintenance for the first three and shifting the present Bureau of Tests to the Controller's office.

EXPLAINS PROPOSAL

Much of the work of the Bureau of Tests is for the Department of Supplies, and the Controller's office, Lang explained, and could be joined with inspection service already maintained by the Controller's office.

Lang said he had not estimated the exact saving which would result from the merger, but stated it would be "considerable."

Director Lang classified his big cut, aside from the proposed merger, as follows: City property, $27,242; tests, $10,236; recreation, $29,322; parks, $72,800; highways and sewers, $263,042; garage, $10,000; engineering salaries, $70,000; repaving, $100,000; miscellaneous accounts, $3,005; bridge maintenance, $9,038; water, $170,000; light, $48,000; director's office, $6,000; deed registry, $1,620; unclassified, $10,000.

SOLICITOR 'CAN'T AID'

City Solicitor C. A. Waldschmidt told Council he didn't see how he could cut anything from his departmental estimates of $165,632, an increase of $20,060 over last year.

Asked whether assistant solicitors gave all their time to city work, Waldschmidt replied:

"No, about 60 per cent."

Questioned as to large fees paid for expert testimony, and reports that West S. Brown had received more than $17,000 last year, Waldschmidt said:

"That is absolutely untrue. What they did was to take four different years and add them together."

$1,000,000 CUT

Cuts proposed by department heads thus far total in excess of $1,000,000. Council has estimated that $5,000,000 must be cut if the threatened 7-mill tax increase is to be forestalled.

State Senator James J. Coyne conferred with members of Council yesterday. Later reports spread that a drastic slash was to be made by Council in the City Detective Bureau.

The first real payroll cut by a department was volunteered yesterday by St. Clair Cooper, chief clerk of the Department of Health, acting for Dr. C. B. Maits, director, unable to be present because of illness.

Cooper offered to eliminate the positions of 35 regular employes and 11 temporary employes and to make other reductions in expenses in the department for a total annual saving of $74,005. He was thanked for the reduction, but told that Council expected more.

Salary Cuts Lower New York Budget

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(Universal)—The Board of Aldermen of New York City last night adopted a 1933 budget of $556,555,993, after making reductions of $585,028 by cutting the salaries of exempt employes and abolishing three bureaus and many jobs.

Another $20,000,000 saving was forecast by the action of the board of estimate in deciding mandatory salaries would have to be reduced by that total.

Fire Leaves Jobless Man, 7 in Family Homeless

A man jobless for seven months, his wife and six children were homeless today after a fire of mysterious origin had swept through their home at 1041 Shreve street, Spring Hill.

Neighbors told police of a prowler chased from the neighborhood shortly before the fire was discovered in the rear of the two-story frame building occupied by Frank Waldorf, his wife, Julie, and six children, Rudolph, 20; Anna, 14; Isabella, 12; Henry, 10; John, 7, and Margaret, 5. Waldorf was not at home at the time of the blaze.

A barking Shepherd dog, Prince, a family pet, awakened Mrs. Waldorf, sleeping on the first floor with John and Margaret. All the children escaped in night attire. Three pet canaries were suffocated. A pet cat, hiding behind a kitchen stove, left the house after the fire with a scorched tail.

City Firemen were forced to stretch hose more than 500 feet. Pending their arrival the eldest son, attired in only underclothing and socks, pumped water at the family pump and poured it on the flames.

Waldorf has been trying to support his family by sale of baked goods, made in a garage in front of the house. Police purchased Waldorf's stock, amounting to $2, after the fire. Police said he was the father of Elizabeth Waldorf, 18, whose disappearance was reported to the Missing Persons Bureau a week ago.

ERK-BROOKS CONTEST LIKELY TO GO BEFORE CONGRESS

BOTH TO FIGHT RETURN BOARD DECISION

Congress will be called upon to decide the winner in the Thirtieth Congressional District race between Twing Brooks (Dem.), and Edmund F. Erk, Republican incumbent, it appeared certain today.

Charles Lane and James F. O'Toole, counsel for the Republican and Democratic nominees respectively, said they would appeal from the figures Return Judges W. H. McNaugher and John P. Egan will certify Thursday as the official results of the election.

Meanwhile both parties were using every technicality to cinch the contest, which so far appears to be in favor of Brooks with a lead of slightly better than 300 votes.

BOXES IMPOUNDED

With the avowed purpose of preventing "additional tampering," the Democrats impounded all boxes in the North Side late yesterday, excepting those from the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth wards, which previously were impounded by the Republicans. In their petition to the return judges, the Democrats specified the boxes were to be placed in the Sheriff's care for safe-keeping.

Today the returning board judges ordered the recount figures from the Eighth District, Twenty-third Ward, computed by the return board. It was the first time in 11 districts that recount board figures were accepted. The judges said that while there was no evidence of fraud in the box, there was evidence of error. By this action Brooks lost 73 votes from his lead of slightly more than 300 in the congressional district.

The Tenth District Election Board's figures were ordered tabulated over the recount board's result on an allegation of fraud. In this district's Erk's vote was boosted on the recount from 140 to 188 and Brook's vote cut from 236 to 184.

Erk gained 56 in the recount of the First District of the Twenty-fourth Ward over the election board, due to error.

SLIT IN CONTAINER

Suspicion was focused on two boxes from the Twenty-fourth Ward when they were opened before the recount board late yesterday. A large slit was visible in the bottom of the Sixth District box. Four keys were tied to the lock on the First District box. Twenty ballots were missing from the Fifth District box.

Judge Harry H. Rowand yesterday signed an order directing the Sheriff to seize the ballot box in the Ninth District of the Ninth Ward, and for the Recount Board to recount the ballots. The petition was presented by Attorney James L. O'Toole, representing the Democratic candidates for the Legislature in the Second Legislative District.

Poll Violence Charged To Four by Woman Clerk

The first step in the County Commissioner's fight to punish election law violators came today with the filing of informations against four men, two of them city policemen, for alleged violations in the First District of the First Ward polling place in the City-County Building.

The informations, drawn up by the District Attorney's office, were filed by Mrs. Katherine E. Newingham, a clerk in the county transcribing bureau, and independent chairman of the First Ward.

Aloysius Miller, city policeman attached to the radio scout car from Central Station, and Traffic Policeman Henry Pieper were charged with intimidating and ejecting a watcher. Mrs. Newingham, the watcher, made similar charges against Leo Ford, election day constable, and William Richardson, a member of the election board. An additional charge of assault and battery was made against Ford.

WIFE ACCUSES DOCTOR IN SUIT

Mrs. Helena A. Ruben, of 7208 Thomas boulevard, today testified in her divorce proceedings against her husband, Dr. Jacob Aaron Ruben, prominent physician, of 5670 Beacon street. She told Judge Harry A. Rowand that her husband threw her downstairs several times, twisted her arm, called her names, stopped her credit and severely restricted her accounts in stores. She testified:

"He twisted my arm and threw me downstairs because he didn't like some improvements I made with money I had saved by dismissing the maid.

"He threatened to put me away in some institution that wouldn't cost much money and where people would forget I ever lived."

Mrs. Ruben whispered in the ears of the court stenographer names she accused her husband of calling her. She testified that for three years she has earned her living by teaching.

The judge refused to consider tax records which Mrs. Ruben's attorney said would show the doctor earned from $22,000 to $25,000 a year.

COUNTY SEEKS CITIZENS' AID ON BUDGET

A general invitation to the taxpayers of Allegheny County was issued today by the commissioners in the hope of finding someone "with a sensible plan of economy" who might assist them in the preparation of the budget and so bring about a reduction of taxes.

The invitation came in answer to the reading of a letter from the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners and Taxpayers League, organized last week at a protest meeting of taxpayers in the Chamber of Commerce.

BARR AROUSED

The letter, signed by J. Leonard Aronson, chairman of the league, called upon the commissioners to bring about a 25 per cent reduction in taxes. Another letter from the Homewood Building and Loan Association reiterated the league's demands.

Commissioner C. M. Barr made the suggestion to invite a member of the league to sit in at the next meeting to assist in making up the budget. Barr declared:

"I understand things were said said at the meeting last week which I would like to have said to me here where I could defend myself."

It was agreed by the commissioners to invite one of the league members.

Commenting on the letters, Chairman McGovern said:

"I am not in favor of listening to any building and loan association or any other group that is in business for profit. They ask for a fixed reduction without any figures to show us how.

"I think we should issue a general invitation to all the taxpayers of the county and any person with a sensible plan of economy will be welcome to sit with us and help us out."

REFORMERS SEE BEER DEFEAT

Predicting any move to legalize beer will meet the same defeat in the present Congress as was meted the repeal bill, the Rev. D. R. H. Martin today termed yesterday's action "the most indecent rushing" as the National Reform Association opened its annual meeting in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Dr. Martin, president of the association, said:

"Never before has there been such a rush to put through legislation. There was not the decency to await the President's message."

A general meeting will be held tonight in the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, when John A. McSparran, state secretary of agriculture, will speak on "The Sabbath in the Nation's Economy," Cameron Ralston, executive secretary, Chicago Committee of 100, also will speak. Informal talks will feature a dinner at the hotel preceding the night's meeting.

TRAILER SKIDS, HITS CAR, POLE

A five-ton trailer of the Mahoning Express Company, Youngstown, O., skidded on the Ohio River boulevard, struck an automobile carrying two persons, and crashed into a pole today. Four hundred five-gallon cans of tomato pulp being brought to the company's plant here were scattered over the street, near the intersection of California and Superior avenues.

The truck driver, Edward Barcus, of Youngstown, and John Roe, 35, of Coraopolis, R. D. 3, and Miss Margaret Rapp, 22, of 32 Highland avenue, Emsworth, occupants of the automobile, were unhurt. Barcus was arrested on a reckless driving charge. The trailer and the automobile were badly damaged.

TALKS ON RADIO ADVERTISING

Advertisers were warned against rushing to the radio as a medium of positive advertising success by Harry Howlett, commercial manager, Station WHK, Cleveland, speaking before the Pittsburgh Advertising Club today in the William Penn Hotel.

Contrasting radio advertising with newspaper and other mediums, Howlett termed it an avenue of romance, music and drama. He said:

"Too much despair advertising has been loaded on its back because of the phenomenal success achieved by programs here and there."

A national survey revealed the pulling power of radio, he said. Citing a toothpaste sale in radio homes, a gain of 35 per cent was found over homes without radios. Howlett declared American broadcasting and programs far excelled those of England.

Mrs. Pinchot to Talk At Pitt on Friday

All University of Pittsburgh activities Friday will be in charge of university women in accordance with the traditional "Woman's Day." The women also will be in charge of the Pitt News on that day.

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot will speak at Memorial Hall at 12:30 p. m.

The Rev. Patrick E. Maher, 53, pastor of the Church of St. Francis Xavier, California avenue, North Side, died this morning in the parish rectory.

ART — Folk Art Exhibition Assembled By Poles

By PENELOPE REDD

A type of exhibition rare in Pittsburgh opens tonight at 434 Oliver avenue. The show is one of folk arts assembled by the Polish Ministry of Commerce and presented locally through the co-operation of the Central Council of Polish organizations and the United States Lines. Victor Kolaskinski arranged hundreds of textiles, polychromed and carved wood, and pottery from a majority of the 16 Polish provinces. In addition to the show, which is open free to the public daily until December 16, musical and other entertainment will be provided every evening.

Miss Redd

New to Pittsburgh is the generous number of the Khilim rugs woven from wool grown high in the mountains. The rugs resemble in color, design and texture, certain Scandanavian and Southwestern Amerindian types. Rich but restrained color themes and austere geometric motifs prevail.

Much brighter, but less significant in design, are the rainbow-striped rugs. These textiles and other of the decorative folk arts participate in the characteristic brilliance marking objects from Lowicz, not far from Warsaw. Painted wooden chests, infinitely gayer than the Pennsylvania Dutch ones, boxes, trenchers and toys illustrate gala adventures in polychromatic design.

Chlopi and panowie are almost indistinguishable one from the other as peasant and nobleman in the glory of semi-oriental mediaeval costumes. Even the devil being routed is an enchanting figure in these decorative trifles associated with Christmastide.

The carved wood from the Zakopane district at the foot of the Tatry Mountains, is concerned with wood as sculpture rather than the polychromatic decoration of smooth surfaces dominant in the Lowicz district. Therefore, their art around Zakopane is much more serious, and lacks the spontaneous air of caricature that one finds in the Lowicz contributions.

The pottery is varied. Some from the mountain districts has an almost Persian design derived from naturalistic motifs. Other pottery bears a strong inflection of Byzantine design from provinces near Russia. While those examples from Pomerania are strongly influenced by the German.

From the province of Polesie is an orphan group of black pottery reminiscent in shape and decoration of Roman Herculaneum. The collection has a flavor which amateurs in folk art will enjoy.

CHAPTER XLVI.

Should you ever visit Singapore, you won't be there long before you will hear the story of the tiger that was found asleep early one morning on one of the billiard tables in the Raffles Hotel. I don't know which version you'll hear. There are many of them; I hope you hear a good one.

This yarn, which has become a part of Far Eastern animal lore, is an excellent example of how the natives take almost any occurrence involving the tiger, the beast they most enjoy dramatizing, and create a legend far removed from what actually happened. Heaven help the writer who, seeking tiger tales, depends on what these gossips tell him.

More than one literary babe-in-the-woods has succumbed to this temptation, with the result that (on two occasions which I particularly recall) perfectly outlandish tiger stories made their appearance. What actually happens in the tiger world is strange enough without the embellishments of imaginative natives.

AMUSED BY STORIES

There is no questioning that a tiger was found in the old billiard room of the Raffles Hotel. There is nothing astonishing about this for at least a dozen times in the last 15 years tigers have swum across the channel from the Johore mainland and wound up on the island of Singapore.

It would have been a simple matter for a tiger that had blundered into Singapore to stray into the Raffles billiard room, which was then a big open space, with no doors or windows, on the ground floor.

One of the stories they tell you with a straight face is that the Chinese boy who came to clean up the room at 6 in the morning had found the tiger asleep on a billiard table and had prodded it with a cue. I thought the native waiter who told me this story was joshing, and my response to it was a hearty laugh. I soon saw that I had offended him and pretended to believe the story.

Another version (the story of one of those eye-witnesse, who, it later developed, wasn't even in Singapore at the time) is to the effect that the tiger, in his rush to get out of the room, knocked over the Chinese boy and made a dash for the kitchen. There, so the yarn goes, the animal helped himself to half a beef which he dragged out on the porch, where he parked himself and ate his meal.

LOGICAL EXPLANATION

One of the few generalizations one can safely make is that in a situation of this kind a tiger would be more concerned about his safety than about making a haul.

Mr. Aratoon, the manager of the hotel, with whom I discussed this Singapore legend, offers the only sensible explanation. Unquestionably, he tells me, a tiger had entered the billiard room. Three reliable people had seen the animal make its escape.

The big cat, he believes, reached the island shortly before dawn. Bewildered by its surroundings, it had dashed from street to street in an effort to find a way out. Seeing the open space on the ground floor of the hotel, it had entered, hoping that perhaps this would lead to open country.

When the boy entered to clean the room, the animal was probably pacing up and down, wondering what to do next. Seeing the boy, the beast's first thought would be to escape and doubtless then it made its dash to safety. In a situation of this kind, even a tiger, due to the strangeness of his surroundings, would be as frightened as the human being he encountered.

To this day there is a Chinese boy-of-all-jobs in the Raffles who tells how he met the emergency when the tiger entered the billiard room. (Long since the boy who actually figured in the episode left the employ of the hotel.)

VALUABLE ANIMALS

He had just started to sweep the floor when he thought he heard something stirring. Looking up, he saw a tiger stretching itself on one of the tables in the far corner of the room. His first thought was to run for help. Then, so his story goes, he got a better hunch. For, after all, the main idea was to get the tiger out of the room.

Taking a billiard ball from a convenient rack he let it fly straight at the animal. Then he fled without waiting to see how good his marksmanship had been. But he feels certain that he must have hit the tiger, for when, a few seconds later, he saw it retreat down the street, it had a perceptible limp!

For a tip, this boy tells his story to any tourist who cares to listen. He changes the details here and there and by next year it ought to be a brand-new story.

Over and over again I have been asked to name the most sought-after—which is the same as saying the most valuable—creature of them all. The answer is: the white elephant.

The most valuable animals in America today are the two single-horned armor-plated Indian rhinos—an almost extinct species—that I brought out of Nepal about eight years ago—one for the New York Zoological Park, the other for the Zoological Society of Philadelphia.

These animals, both of which are alive and in excellent condition today, would probably bring about $20,000 apiece. This is a very high price for an animal but small in comparison with what a white elephant would bring.

For most of the years that I have been engaged in collecting I have had standing orders for white elephants—at almost any price I cared to name. I found it useless to tell the circus authorities, dealers, etc., who wanted to get hold of specimens of these rare animals that native superstition made it practically impossible to get one of the freaks out of Asia. They kept firing letters and cables at me pleading with me to fill their orders.

TRICK FAILS

Efforts of showmen to secure a white elephant began with the Barnum era. One of the early circus owners, finding the barriers of superstition too much for him—you see, a curse is supposed to descend upon anyone who takes or sends a white elephant away from its native land—resorted to a typical Yankee ruse.

With the aid of a brush and gallons of whitewash this showman created a white elephant of his own. He did too good a job, however, with the result that his creation was a flop. It was just another case of a man paying the price of his literal-mindedness. He gave his white elephant a pure white body color, not knowing that the skin of a white elephant is mainly a light or pinkish gray.

The dear old public might have accepted this product of his imagination—for it was not on speaking terms with white elephants—if not for the caustic intervention of a scientist who pointed out that whitewash was all right on stones bordering country lanes and on fence-posts, but that it did not improve an elephant—or change its species.

A representative of the circus, wielding a huge publicity brush, is said to have made a noble effort to whitewash his boss, pointing out—so the legend goes—that the showman had not really attempted to slip one over. The elephant, suffering from a skin malady, had been covered with a white salve and had been exhibited in error as a white elephant. You know how it is. Mistakes will happen.

The white elephant is an albino and has all the strange attributes of the type: pink eyes, white toenails, white bristles around the head and ears, a white tuft on the end of the tail, white or light reddish body-hairs and skin of a pinkish gray hue, lighter at the end of the trunk, around the flaps of the ears, about the mouth and on parts of the under side of the body.

In 1926, while I was at Singapore, I learned that a white elephant had been caught in a drive up near Katha in Burma. Having operated in this territory, I knew the keddah walla (coral owner) of the district, whom I promptly wired to see if the report was correct. I soon learned that it was, but that the authorities were not interested in my offer of 25,000 rupees ($9,000) for the animal. I kept on bidding until I had reached 50,000 rupees, finally receiving a reply to the effect that the animal was not for sale.

Had the animal been found in Siam I should not even have gone to the trouble of sending a wire. I knew from long experience that all white elephants found in that country were royal property and automatically belonged to the king.

There is about as much chance of getting a chang pheuak, the Siamese name for these freaks, out of Siam as there is of walking out of Egypt with the Pyramids tucked under one's arm. It just can't be done. You'd be caught at it—and almost simultaneously you'd find a knife between your ribs.

That 77,118 Americans were killed in the Big War. During the eight years following, 137,017 Yanks were killed here by autos!

That Chicagoans say Halstead St. is the longest street in the world, longer than Broadway. (Them's fightin' words, Chicago!)

That in Washington's day it was all right to drink tea from a saucer, and when Queen Elizabeth first used a fork, a clergyman sermon'd against the use of it in church, saying that it was an insult to eat with instruments when "God gave us fingers to eat our meat!"

That the original letter "A" created by the Phoenicians, was upside-down, to indicate the head of an ox. (Ox me another!)

That Morris Gest was once a wave in a burlesk show. He had to lie under a green sheet and bounce up and down to make waves.

That Bach, the composer, had 20 children and 11 became musicians. (Can you imagine being a neighbor when they practiced?)

That Beau Brummel, who set the fashion standards for a generation, was slovenly in his dress during his last 20 years.

That John Chambers, 13, a newsboy of Lebanon, Ind., sells so many papers he has bought his parents a house!

That the Pathfinder argues that many of the men who go around bragging that they are self-made men should be apologizing instead.

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Whoever thinks that conversation is a lost art ought to go to the Nixon Theater to see S. N. Behrman's new comedy, which is entitled "Biography," and brings on that delightfully alive Ina Claire, that urbanely cosmopolitan Arnold Korff, that adolescently impulsive Earle Larimore, and four or five others in a series of reminiscences and dialogues ranging from art to metabolism.

The art gets into the comedy because the heroine is a painter. She is also described as a "female Casanova," and her life is once likened to a "bedroom farce." As these terms are originated by gentlemen who have been and still are in love with her, one would expect to see her wafted down the Nile in a golden barge with purple sails. But she appears to be quite as respectable as anybody else from Knoxville, Tenn., where she had her first love affair with the future Senator of the Fundamentalist Commonwealth.

Mr. Seibel

She has a sense of humor, which leads her to ask her ancient swain, "Do you want to be a Senator or can't you help it?" Aside from that and a bewitching smile, and a large tolerance for all sorts of bores and cads, she is easily the champion in a conversational Marathon—very amusing conversation, very well phrased, but after all only dialogue, not drama.

SOME OF THE MODELS

The knowing ones will slyly whisper that Dramatist Behrman has made his hero out of Claire Sheridan with a spice of Isadora Duncan. They may insinuate maliciously that he has taken a certain Bernarr Macfadden as the model for his big publisher, played with urbane ease by Charles Richman.

These would be pardonable purloinings from the Hall of Fame, if he had put them into drama or comedy. But there is only one line of incisive drama in the three acts—the words, "That story must not come out!" And the only scene that veers into real comedy—when the Tennessee publisher played by Richman proceeds to date up the lady he has just met—smacks strongly of a cheap vaudeville sketch.

It is hard to believe in the "spiritual and physical wanderlust" of the lovely lady, and just as hard to believe in the roughneck editor who aspires to be "critic at large of things as they are."

It is hard to believe that so lively and sophisticated a young thing as the publisher's daughter, played effervescently by Mary Arbenz, could ever think of marrying the stodgy and stiff stuffed shirt finely filled by Jay Fassett.

And what Alexander Clark has to do with it all—he plays a pompous hero from Hollywood for one scene and then is swallowed by the river Styx—is beyond critical comprehension.

IT'S HER LUCKY DAY

The scene is the studio of Marion Froude—this artist who is described as "superficial, carnal, irresponsible." It is her "lucky day," and everybody drops in. Minnie the maid, acted with domestic felicity by Helen Salinger, is kept busy answering the buzzer of the door. A young gentleman has been waiting for quite awhile, and it turns out he is an editor with a $2,000 check for the artist's biography. The genial composer played so convincingly by Korff drops in, so does the old Tennessean lover, now on his way to the Senate. They all reminisce except the editor, who scraps with everybody, but persuades the lady to write her biography for his magazine.

In the second act the Senator is having his portrait painted by his one-time sweetheart, and is afraid she has put him into her story, which would spoil his chances for the Senate. So he and his prospective father-in-law get the obstinate editor fired because he will not kill that story. Then the editor also gets reminiscent and tells how his father was shot in a coal mine strike—whereupon the artist lady promptly falls in love with him.

In the third act it turns out that the biography is quite harmless—and we are left wondering why the lady did not tell the prospective Senator so and save all this fuss. But then we should have missed a lot of interesting conversation and grave problems of metabolism and crime—"Do you eat enough roughage?" the publisher asks the lady—would have remained untouched by the finger of farce.

ALL THERE BUT DRAMA

In short, we have in this new production of the Theater Guild a play that has everything but theater. The characterization is good—the dialogue is sometimes very witty—the acting is often near to magnificence, especially when Ina Claire and Arnold Korff have the stage. The setting designed by Jo Mielziner is a masterpiece in the old Belasco mood. The lighting, the direction, the tempo—everything is as it should be.

But where is the play? The entire action revolves around a point that is nowhere in an Einsteinian universe of well-weighed words.

Yet the general effect of the comedy, which ends in a sweetly romantic parting, is pleasing. With its 100 per cent acting, "Biography" has a chance to be a best seller.

Tyros Sell First Story For Film Production

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 6.—Two Hollywood girls, Margaret Roberts and Charlotte Miller, have just sold the first motion picture story they ever wrote to Fox.

It is called "Bad Boy," and Winfield Sheehan thinks so well of it that he assigned Raoul Walsh to direct and Sally Eilers and James Dunn to co-star. This will be the reunion of the team, who made such a big hit last year in "Bad Girl."

Though the happy pair of authors must be given credit for crossing up all the laws of probability, they are not outsiders to the business. Margaret Roberts, who looks like Janet Gaynor and is married, has been acting as Frank Craven's secretary. Charlotte Miller, who also is married and has a youngster, has been a reader at the studio.

The story idea which proved so lucky for them is about a sailor and his sweetheart. As an added honor, they have been asked to help Director Rauol Walsh prepare it for the screen.

WILL IS CHAGRINED

It was a small thing, but it completely upset tradition on the Fox lot. From time immemorial, Janet Gaynor and Will Rogers have called it a day at 5 p. m. But on the "State Fair" set the other afternoon, the hour struck and neither made a move. Hardly able to believe it, the company kept on working.

Finally, at 6 p. m., the director called it a day and went over to thank Janet and Bill.

Then it all came out. She thought Will was being a sport, and he thought she was. Were they chagrined?

DIDN'T GET JOB

A film expedition known as the Dutch East Indies Exploring Company, advertised for a 100-pound girl to be leading woman in several jungle pictures.

A woman in Chino, Cal., replied: "I am 35 years old, unencumbered, weigh 132 (can reduce), 5 feet 5½ tall, dark brown curly hair, blue eyes, my own teeth, white and even. Not afraid of man or beast, can laugh or weep, ride a bicycle or an elephant.

"Now isn't there some place on the trip for me? Anything from the leading role to washing dishes. One hour's notice is all I need. Yours for a non-depression jungle."

She didn't get the job.

'The Devil Passes,' Pitt Comedy, Proves to Be Earnest Satire

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"The Devil Passes," comedy presentation by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt last night, was by far the most ambitious undertaking of the resident company in that theater this season. There was a large and smartly-dressed audience present, the opening night being a benefit under the auspices of the social service department of the Presbyterian Hospital. This is mentioned at the outset because the "house" itself seemed an essential part of the play, which is a large-order comedy by Benn W. Levy, and nobody knows better than Mr. Levy how to dress any kind of a comedy smartly, clothing it with brisk, quippy and meaningful dialogue.

"The Devil Passes" is rather a serious comedy, its humor being largely of a sardonic flavor, despite the fact that it is more or less of a sermon, the lesson of which is that folks for the most part are a lot better than they pretend to be.

CHANCE TO TEST SELF

We are not intimating that part of it is a fault, but if you are feeling a little disgusted with yourself, and accusing yourself of being not all that you should be, perhaps a visit to the Pitt will convince you that you are not such a bad sort after all. That is if the characters in the play are supposed to be typical.

After seeing it you may not be exactly sure that the Devil really is present at all. The only hint that one has about the matter is in the title, but it doesn't take long for the audience to surmise that the sulphuric gentleman really is on the stage in the garb of a clergyman. And, in spite of his really first-class job of tempting various people, they all, in effect, say "get thee behind me, satan." All except one—and she, poor girl, is left with a broken heart.

TITLE MAY BE WRONG

Yet when the finale comes one is not sure whether the Boss of all the Imps has been at work, or the opposite, for, as it turns out, he has been doing a pretty good job in behalf of the Church and all that it represents. So perhaps the title is all wrong, although the final curtain descends with the arch-tempter trying to work his wiles again.

Alden Chase had the role of the two-faced curate who tested all of these people as to their straightforwardness by showing them ways to do little things that would be to their advantage without anybody but themselves being the wiser. He had the poise and the manner to make the role credible, too. Another clergyman was the role of Hunter Gardner, a guest artist with the company this week. It is an emotional part and in it Mr. Gardner showed a gift for portrayal of deep and powerful feeling.

WELL BALANCED IN PARTS

This is a very well-balanced play, for practically no part in it is small—all being important. Sam Flint and Betty Hanna, as a pair of oddly-assorted and unconventional sweethearts, earned praise. So did Hugh Banks, as a disappointed author, and Kathryn Meskyl, as an aspiring actress. So did Ella Ethridge, as a minister's dutiful wife, and Roy Elkins as the artist husband of Miss Meskyl.

The physical part of the production was outstanding, too, the two settings of the prologue and three acts being in taste, as well as realistically constructed.

Settlement to Present Mixed Program

H. Gendel and Luba Rymer of the Jewish Art Theater, of New York City, will present a program of Jewish songs, recitations and a one-act play, "The Dollar Inquisition," tomorrow night in the Theresa L. Kaufmann Theater of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement.

Notes About Coming Bills In Screen Theaters

Opening tomorrow in the Enright Theater, the screen feature for three days will be "Hat Check Girl." This is a comedy-drama in which Sally Eilers has the featured role, with Ben Lyon in a prominent part.

There will be no mid-week change in the Sheridan Square program tomorrow, the customary day for a new bill there. Instead Paul Muni, in "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," will continue as the feature for several additional days.

A cast including Evelyn Brent, H. B. Warner, Ned Sparks, Lew Cody and Marceline Day will be seen on the Fulton screen for a week, beginning Thursday, in "Should a Man Tell?" It is a movie version of the Wilson Collison play, "The Crusader."

For the week beginning Friday the screen feature in the Stanley will be "The Conquerors," costarring Richard Dix and Ann Harding. RKO, the producer, hails it as the successor to "Cimarron." Guy Kibbee, Edna May Oliver and "Skeets" Gallagher are in the cast.

"Central Park" will be seen on the Warner screen as the next attraction, opening Friday. In it two young people, strangers at 9 o'clock, are in love at 10 and in jail by midnight. Joan Blondell and Wally Ford are principally concerned in this romantic comedy-drama.

From Friday on for a week the Penn screen will have one of the most popular, if not the handsomest, male stars of the screen. Of course, Wallace Beery—who else could it be by that description? He will be seen in his new picture, "Flesh." Karen Morley will be the chief feminine interest.

Beginning Saturday the Davis and Regent theaters will change their double-feature bill, the incoming films to be "Once in a Lifetime" and "Scarlet Dawn." Jack Oakie, Zasu Pitts and Aline MacMahon are in the former, while Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Nancy Carroll are featured in "Scarlet Dawn."

For three days, beginning Thursday, the Avenue Cinema will feature "Lummox" on its screen. The cast includes Ben Lyon and William Bakewell.

Eddie Cantor Musical Farce in Cinema

As the assistant of an astrologer and medium, in a musical farce called "Palmy Days," Eddie Cantor clowns and sings on the screen of the Avenue Cinema for three days this week. The German patrons will find this mixture of bathing beauties, crime thriller, physical culture revue and Charlotte Greenwood somewhat mystifying. Some will take is as an expose of mediums—and it can be taken that way—but it is really very funny, though not new. After three days Fannie Hurst's "Lummox" will be shown. There is also a short true-crime mystery, a very good cartoon comedy of "Wild Ducks," and a travel picture of Tahiti.

Academy Burlesque Is 'Town Scandals'

"Town Scandals," current in the Academy, is in two acts and 29 scenes, embracing singing, dancing and comedy. Mildred Cozierre, a "blues" singer billed as the "Sophie Tucker of Burlesque," is making her second appearance at the Academy this season in this offering; Rose Marie, a dancer, is featured on the illuminated runway, supported by 18 Elinor Cook dancing girls. Billie Diamond sings. Alice Duval, singer and dancer, gives her impressions of dances of Gilda Grey. Benny Moore, Bert Carr and Artie Lloyd are the comedians.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The week of Irish Players repertoire in the Nixon will begin next Monday when the company from the Abbey Theater, Dublin, will be seen in "The New Gossoon," three-act comedy by George Shiels. The company this year includes F. J. McCormick, Eileen Crowe, Barry Fitzgerald, Maureen Delaney, Michael J. Dolan and Arthur Shields, who have been seen here previously, as well as others. The seat sale will open Thursday.

Jean May, who will return to the stage of the Pitt next week as a member of the George Sharp Players, was a player in the same company when it was at about the top of its success, the leading man at the time having been Paul McGrath. Miss May will make her new bow in "Naughty Cinderella," a comedy that once served Irene Bordoni.

Tonight in the Little Theater of the College of Arts, Carnegie Tech, students of the drama department will be seen in an old English melodrama, "Ticket-of-Leave Man." It is directed by B. Iden Payne, and will play a full week, skipping Saturday.

Broadways Of the World — All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

EXCELSIOR HOTEL, ROME, Italy.—Our second stop on my grand tour of the Roman night clubs was the Florida Club. Although looking a bit seedy by this time, my party was still intact, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Forte and Mr. Salmon were still with us. Just four newspapermen out to see what the town looked like. Or, if you prefer, three newspapermen and a columnist.

The Florida proved to be very much like the Apollo, the club we had just left. You pay an admission fee to get into the foyer. You pay for the coatroom in advance in order to leave the foyer. By that time, if you're smart, you save plenty of money by calling the whole thing quits and walking out before you even see the club. But people are never smart in night clubs. If they were, there wouldn't be any night clubs.

The interior of the Florida is much the same as any large speakeasy in New York. With one exception, however. In New York you generally stumble over the bar as soon as you enter the room. Over here they keep the bar hidden in the rear. I suppose they're waiting for prohibition in this town. Then they can have their bars in the open, too.

No sooner were we seated than the waiter was at our table with an immense bottle of wine.

"Tell that bird," I told Mr. Forte, "that we've had enough wine for one night. I want some brandy. Tell him that if he opens that bottle I don't pay the check."

Mr. Forte did not have to do any translating. There are two words that everyone understands over here—"pay" and "check." And when those two words are accompanied by a negative motion of the head the language becomes universal. Accordingly, after summoning another waiter for assistance, our garcon marched back with the bottle of wine.

I felt quite proud of myself. For an American to get the best of the bargain in these confines is no small feat. A little later, however, I wasn't quite so proud. The bill for the small drinks was 210 lire. And the wine would have cost 185.

You can't win. . . .

So far as women are concerned—ah, now we're getting somewhere!—the racket over here is exactly the same as it is in any clip or steer joint in hhe United Staaes. Each club employs from 20 to 30 damsels whose duty it is to kid the suckers while the latter gentlemen are buying wine.

The wages that these girls receive are very small, indeed. That's the pittance of it. They get about 75 cents each per night in actual salary and, if the suckers don't arrive, it's just too bad. If the chumps are out, however, the girlies get a commission on each drink that is bought.

Most of the damsels in these clubs over here are a cross between Texas Guinan and Ted Husing—if Tex and Ted will pardon the comparison. Most of the mammas use paint and powder to such an extent that, instead of being beautified, they merely succeed in making themselves a little homelier.

It goes without saying that I wasn't particularly anxious for the company of any of the ladies of this club. And I'm not kidding either, Mr. Savoldi. But it suddenly dawned upon me that I hadn't written a sob story of any kind since I left New York.

If I was going to get my story, this was obviously the place to find it. I spoke to Mr. Morgan, Mr. Salmon and Mr. Forte.

"Gentlemen," I said, "will one of you kindly stroll over to yonder table and bring a girl over to me?"

He arose.

Before you could say Charles Cerebelli, a young lady was seated beside me. Her name, she said, was Marie—and it didn't take me long to realize that I would get no story here. Marie's knowledge of English was limited to seven or eight words—and a polite laugh to accompany them.

"Where do you come from, kid?" I began.

"Te, he," she replied. "Funny America. Te he. You buy Marie wine?"

"Wait a minute, sister," I returned. "Not so fast. Story first. Where from you come?"

She never even hesitated.

"Te, he," she tittered. "No understand funny American. You buy Marie wine? Te, he."

That was too much for me.

"Funny American no understand Marie," I muttered. "You'll take beer and like it. Te, he."

"Thank you," she said. "I tell man bring wine quick. American very nice to Marie."

That floored me. I began to wonder exactly who was kidding whom in this little game.

Silence for a moment. Then—"American like dance?"

"No," I said abruptly, "I no want dance. Especially, sister, with a dizzy dame like you."

That caused her to laugh again. And when I tell you that her laugh was slowly driving me daffy, I'm not kidding. I had just about made up my mind to ask for a check when Marie placed a hand on my shoulder. She leaned close.

"American nice man," she breathed. "What would he enjoy?"

"Marie really want know," I whispered, "what American would enjoy?"

She nodded rapidly.

"A good baseball game," I tried triumphantly. "Do you think you can do anything about it?"

Her only answer was to give me that same, imbecilic laugh. And the last one was my finish. I stood up.

"Boy," I said, "I'm getting my check and leaving. I'm saying good night right away."

I turned to Marie—and I must admit I was nasty.

"Goodbye, Marie," I said. "Razzberries to you."

She grinned.

"To you, too," was her perfect reply.

To End a Cough In a Hurry, Mix This at Home

Saves $2. No Cooking! So Easy!

Millions of housewives have found that, by mixing their own cough medicine, they get a purer, more effective remedy. They use a recipe which costs about one-fourth as much as ready-made medicine, but which really has no equal for breaking up obstinate coughs.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. The syrup is easily made with 2 cups sugar and one cup water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and makes the most effective remedy that money could buy. Keeps perfectly, and children love its taste.

Its quick action in loosening the phlegm, clearing the air passages, and soothing away the inflammation, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Pirate Trades Pending.

BUCS MAY MAKE DEALS IN COLUMBUS

DON'T BE SURPRISED if the Pittsburgh club puts over a trade or two during the annual meeting of the minor baseball leagues in Columbus, O. It wasn't merely for the ride that the Pirate officials went to the Buckeye capital today. They have some definite objectives in the direction of deals, some fixed ideas as to what players they want and as to what material of their own they can afford to give up in order to get them, and the main purpose of their Ohio trip is believed to be to confer with the parties at the other end of the proposed dickers.

George Gibson

Possibly none of the deals planned will go through. The other side may demand players whom Manager George Gibson cannot spare. Or perhaps a final agreement cannot be reached at Columbus and negotiations may be carried over until the major league meetings in New York next week. But it won't be due to any lack of generous offers by the Buc bosses if Pittsburgh does not get some new and helpful timber, nor will it be their fault if the deals are not consummated before they leave Columbus. The Corsair leaders are after quick action if they can get it.

SIGNS POINTING TO Maj. Frank Cavanaugh's probable successor as head football coach at Fordham next year have swung around to Harry Stuhldreher, of Villanova, and Maj. Bob Neyland, former Army star at Tennessee.

If there is any hitch in the reported plan to sign Stuhldreher tomorrow, the post will be offered to Neyland. To accept the Fordham berth it would be necessary for Neyland to resign from the Army. It was possible for him to coach at Tennessee without resigning because he was stationed nearby.

THE FOOTBALL coaches may play a bigger part than usual in the making of the playing rules for next season. At their annual meeting in New York on December 27 and 28, Lou Little, of Columbia, and Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, will propose a special conference of 25 of the country's outstanding mentors.

The object is to have these men hold a two-day session in some out-of-the-way spot about two weeks before the rules committee sits for its yearly deliberations. Little and Hanley believe that a conference of that sort would furnish the rules committee with an excellent basis for its own meeting.

LITTLE HIMSELF SUGGESTS "just one more change and then let the rules stand for a period of years." He thinks forward passing should be permitted from anywhere behind the line. "The various changes made for 1932 tended to produce a stalemate between attack and defense," he argues. "Let us assist the offensive in general by permitting the throwing of a forward pass from any spot behind the line of scrimmage. The rules now stipulate that the passer must be at least five yards back. If we remove this restriction, the defending backs will not come charging in so fast. They will wait a bit to diagnose the play, thus throwing a greater defensive burden on the line and facilitating the running game. Of course, the air game also would be benefited."

Lou Little

THE COLUMBIA COACH says that will be his only suggestion and that frequent tinkering with the rules must be stopped. He thinks it is possible for football, like the individual, to be oversupervised, and that the rulemakers must not pamper the game any more than it should pamper the player.

As Little is a member of the advisory committee of coaches of the Football Rules Committee, along with Howard Jones, Mal Stevens and Bill Alexander, his attitude and opinions carry considerable weight. He was the prime mover for the changes of 1932 on the kickoff and the dead ball, and it is conceivable that he may be successful in his forward pass campaign.

MIKE HIGGINS, infield recruit of the A's, who will try to fill the place of Jimmy Dykes at third base next season, comes up with the record of having played more baseball this year than any other man.

Higgins took part in every game on the spring training trip of the Portland club, appeared in 200 Coast League contests, and then went to Texas to finish up the season playing semi-pro games.

STRIKE-OUT RECORDS FOR last season in the National League show that the Pittsburgh pitchers did not shine in that department. None of them fanned as many as seven in a game. But it was far more important that they were winning ball games and thus making it possible for the Pirates to beat out clubs that had hurlers high in the fanning table. The best performance of the year was 15 whiffs in 12 innings by Carl Hubbell, of the Giants, against the Dodgers. The leaders for nine innings were Dazzy Vance and Van Mungo, with 12 each against the Phillies.

CHANGES IN TRACK and field implements continue. Now there's a rubber discus coming in as the latest. It's being used at only one school so far, but its sponsors see much merit in the thing that they think it may be adopted generally in time. It was invented by Harry Campbell, track coach at Los Angeles Junior College, to lessen the danger of serious injuries existing in the use of the steel-rimmed discus on his small athletic field.

The new platter is composed of oxides of lead combined with pure rubber, and there is no core to it, the same composition being used throughout. It has the same dimensions and weight as the wooden platter with the steel rim, is flexible, and hasn't the wild tendency to bounce, but rather holds fairly well to the ground after it hits.

IN ONE MONTH'S use the new discus showed practically no wear or tear, and there was no loss in weight. Its invention follows closely on the adoption of the leather shot by the Junior Pentathlon on the coast, and officials of that body are now considering the adoption of the rubber platter.

Frankie Battaglia

About the only implement now left to be changed is the javelin, and Campbell indicates he also has some ideas in that direction whereby he hopes to eliminate the danger attending the tossing of the steel-tipped spear.

THE SEMI-FINAL to the featherweight championship fight between Kid Chocolate and Fidel La Barba in New York Friday night will mark the first step toward straightening out the middleweight title tangle. Frankie Battaglia, Italian-Canadian walloper, the victim of a questionable draw decision when he met Chick Devlin in the elimination series, had declared he never would fight in New York again, but he has consented to meet Devlin in a return bout Friday. The winner of that will be matched with Ben Jeby, recognized as the champion in New York State, and the victor there will be paired with Marcel Thil, of France, to settle the world championship. Battaglia is considered by many boxing men the best bet in the lot. They say he deserved the decision over Devlin in their first meeting, and he has already knocked out Jeby in one round.

IOWA OWNER MAY PURCHASE K. C. CLUB

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—After another round of argument, debate and quibbling, minor leagues baseball magnates today seemed as far away from an agreement on a proposed salary limit for their clubs as they were when the subject was first placed before them.

The International League had held its annual meeting and left the question undecided until it could meet jointly with the American Association and the Pacific Coast League. That joint meeting was held yesterday and again the salary fixing proposition came in for much argument but no definite action.

PLAN CONFAB TODAY

The three Class AA circuits will go into another huddle today, but in the meanwhile leagues of lower classification are holding off action until their larger brothers make up their minds.

The American Association acting independently has approved a salary limit of $6,500 a month. The International circuit has gone on record as favoring a salary limit, but one not so low as that adopted by the association. The Pacific Coast moguls firmly insist they are interested neither in a salary nor player limit.

It was rumored here that George Muehlebach is ready to give up his ownership of the Kansas City American Association baseball club and that the name most frequently mentioned as the possible purchaser is Lee Kaiser, of the Des Moines, Ia., Western League club.

It is believed possible that Muehlebach already has sold the club but this could not be confirmed. Muehlebach is ill at his home.

The salary limit was one of many recommendations made by the "committee of five" of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues in an effort to place minor league baseball on a firmer footing.

REDS IN MARKET

Demand for a "showdown" on grievances of the New Jersey International League Baseball Club against Brooklyn will be made today to Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, it was announced by Sam Calacurcio, president of the Jersey City team. The owner said:

"I will demand that he force Brooklyn to give back all my players at once."

He charges that Brooklyn took an option on his club, took over his best players, then failed to execute the option, but kept his stars.

Donie Bush, of the Cincinnati Reds, is hunting a good third baseman. A trade or a purchase may be negotiated at the present meeting.

CASES SETTLED

While it was taking the attention of the magnates the National Board of Arbitration rolled into action and settled 13 cases, chief of which was the allowing of a $1,166.67 salary claim of Manager Win Clark against the Norfolk Club. Other cases settled by the board were:

Allowed the claims of players Bert Gregory, Shirley Ross, George Palka and Walter Laskowski against the Waterloo club. These players were given notes for salary due, but there was no date of maturity on the dates. The club was given until February 15 to settle.

Application of Player John Coffey for free agency from the Clarksburg club was granted.

Claim of Umpire Gaston against the Mississippi League was allowed.

Claims of Albert (Chief) Bender, Guy Shaltzer, Merrit McCloy and Frank Mulroney against the Erie club of the Central league allowed.

Claim of Player William Dreesen against Toronto, disallowed.

Ohio Boxer Killed In Auto Accident

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—A few hours after he won the welterweight boxing championship of Ohio, Jimmy Collins, 20, Toledo, was killed when his automobile overturned south of Bowling Green today.

The boxer was returning from Lima, where he won a 10-round fight over Sammy O'Dell, Akron.

K. O. Christner, Akron heavyweight, knocked out Dick Nolan, of Pittsburgh, in the second round of the other scheduled 10-round bout on the Lima card.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE ROAD THAT WALKED—The province of Kansu, China, was visited by a catastrophic earthquake in 1922, resulting in more than 100,000 deaths. The Chinese have no word for landslide, for which they substitute the ideograph signifying "The Mountains Walked." The most singular freak of the Kansu cataclysm occurred when a quarter-mile section of the road near Tsingning was lifted from its bed and carried over the bed of a stream, coming to rest intact upon the top of a hill formed by loose loess. In this extraordinary sweep of the road, the poplars lining it were carried along and even crows' nests in the trees were carried undisturbed to the road's new site. THE WRITING HORSE—"Germinal," the writing stallion, was trained by his owner, Dr. Rouhet, of France. The most interesting feat of this intelligent equine was his ability to write legibly and neatly with the aid of a brush fastened in his mouth. Upon being articulated by his master, he could put down any of the 12 words with which the stallion was familiar.

PIRATE BOSSES AT CONFAB

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Illness kept Pirate President Bill Benswanger at home today when Manager Gibson and Vice President Sam Watters left by auto for Columbus, where tomorrow the minor leagues of baseball will convene. Benswanger was ordered to bed yesterday while running a slight fever. He felt somewhat better today, but his physician instructed him to forego the trip in the interest of his health.

The Buccaneer head men expect to spend three days at the doings of the minor fellows. Every club in the major leagues is slated to be represented at one of the biggest pow-wows the smaller circuits have staged in a decade.

The Pirates have been trying to acquire Outfielder Fred Lindstrom, of the Giants, since the season closed, but several other teams are said to be in the free-for-all which radiates around this sterling performer. Fred says he is dissatisfied with his present berth as a result of a promise which he avers was not fulfilled. Lindy states he was promised the managerial toga which fell upon the broad shoulders of Bill Terry.

It is altogether likely the Pirates have offered one or two good players in return for Lindstrom. Comorosky and Thevenow might not be bad guesses in this connection, but the Giants, apparently, are holding out for one of the Waners or Pie Traynor.

PITCHER MARRIED

MADISON, Conn., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Raymond (Babe) Phelps, Brooklyn pitcher, and Miss Phyllis Belveau, former New York show girl, were married here Saturday, it has been learned.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Lew Raymond, the Arena matchmaker, tells the story of a fighter once managed by the late Leo P. Flynn who suffered 19 straight knockout defeats . . . So the ingenious Flynn got out circulars billing him as a man with 19 straight knockouts to his credit . . . A promoter in the sticks fell for the gag and signed the boxer for a main bout . . . When the fighter arrived in town, the promoter asked him for the names of the men he had beaten . . . "Beaten?" came back the boxer . . . "Why, I never licked anybody." . . . "But what about the 19 straight knockouts?" the promoter insisted . . . "Oh, sure," was the comeback, "I've been stopped in my last 19 fights." . . . His opponent made it 20 that night.

And Sam Gibbs, manager of Bobby Leitham, tells about the delegation from a certain city that left for Baltimore to attend the most recent convention of the National Boxing Association . . . Only one member of the party ever got to Baltimore, and, in his dazed condition, he wandered into the hotel where the convention was being held, moved into a large room where a body was in session and picked himself out a seat . . . After listening to a lot of blah-blah for about a half-hour, he asked his neighbor, "How's the game in your state?" . . . "The game?" replied the neighbor . . . "My state is a fishing state, not a game state." . . . After another hour the delegate finally tumbled that he was sitting in on a game and fishing convention . . . He told the story on himself when he arrived back home, but exonerated himself with the crack, "How was I to know that two conventions were going on in the same hotel at the same time?"

The quitting of Stanford by Pop Warner, former Pitt coach, to take up the job of making Temple University, in Philadelphia, a big-time football institution, with a fat five-year contract, calls to mind the fact that Temple University, now a thriving monument of learning, with a student body three times as large as that at Stanford and a stadium seating 40,000, sprouted from an addition to the Temple Church, made famous by its late pastor, the noted lecturer, Dr. Russell Conwell, who delivered his familiar "Acres of Diamonds" speech thousands of times . . . The university had a humble beginning, but its rise has been phenomenal.

Warner's record when he set Pitt on the road to becoming a football power was one of the best in the sport's history . . . He went through the 1915, '16, '17 and '18 seasons undefeated and suffered his first setback in a post-season game against an all-star team representing the Naval Reserves in Cleveland at the end of the 1918 campaign, the score being 10 to 9 . . . While here for the Pitt game, a few weeks ago, he laughed as he recalled some of the queer angles connected with that battle . . . His first defeat by a college team while coaching Pitt came in the second game of

GIRL ATHLETE PROTESTS BAN

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Mildred Babe Didrikson, Dallas athlete and Olympic games champion, has issued an emphatic denial that she had given any individual or company permission to use her name in advertising.

Advised the National Amateur Athletic Union had declared her ineligible for A. A. U. competition, she said she had not violated any rule that would impair her standing and expressed surprise.

Secretary Daniel J. Ferris, of the A. A. U. in New York, announced she had disqualified herself as an amateur by permitting her name and picture to appear in the advertisement of a motor car which was given nationwide release in Sunday newspapers. She said:

"I let this automobile company make a picture of me. But I told them not to use it. They did so without my permission.

"I do not intend to turn professional before next summer—if then; and I want to continue as an amateur at least through the present basketball season. We're going to have a great team and hope to win back the national championship."

Col. M. J. McCombs, athletic director for the insurance company for which she works, said he would telegraph Ferris immediately to confirm the report she had been ruled ineligible and, in the event this action already has been taken, will enter a damage suit for the girl against the motor company.

COACH GROOMS BIG QUINTET FOR HOYAS

By JESS CARVER

While the noble footballers are romping about their practice field prepping for their trip to the Rose Bowl at Pasadena and the third and fourth stringers are fighting it out for berths on the squad of 35 players who'll be taken on the jaunt, Dr. Red Carlson, the Braddock Bombardier, is perfecting the details, first, of his third (or is it fourth?) basketball clinic and second, of his varsity court team.

Dr. Carlson

When the Braddock Bombardier sets out to accomplish anything, he usually succeeds. He set out once while a player at Pitt to tackle Chick Meehan, then quarterback and star on the Syracuse football team, and Bob Peck set out on the same mission at the same time. The result was that Mister Meehan still has the shakes from the bumping he received.

FEATURES CARDED

Demonstration of ball-handling by Chuck Taylor, the Thurston of basketball; a talk on diet and training by Dr. George Kowallis, former star forward of the great undefeated Pitt quintet of the Hyatt era; a talk or two by Coach Carlson and chats by Chic Davies, of the Dukes; Max Hannum, of Tech; Frank Wolf, of Waynesburg; Waldo Tippen, of Allegheny; Ken Loeffler, of Geneva, and Cal Bolster, of the local officials' colony.

Coach Carlson is not having any easy time of it in selecting a starting varsity to toss against Georgetown in the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference inaugural Sat'day night, either. Pitt boasts a strong squad this year, and the rivalry is so keen and the players of such high caliber than from day to day, it is almost impossible to set a definite lineup.

Right now, however, it looks like a team of near-six footers will be in there, with Skippy Hughes and Don Smith at the forwards; Claire Cribbs at center and Russ Ochenshirt and Don McCamant at the guards.

PITT AFTER REVENGE

The fact that Georgetown beat the Pitts last year in Washington hardly will instill in the bosums of the Panthers any feeling of charity toward the Hoyas this time. I think the old power will be turned on, for the good Doctor is a firm believer of brewing confidence, and there is no surer way of accomplishing that end than by running up a nice decisive tally in the first time out.

Coach Ray Montgomery, coach of the Pitt Alumni eleven, which will do an impersonation of Southern California here December 17, meeting the Panther varsity, has announced a definite lineup. The team will use all the Southern California plays Coach Montgomery can recall, and unless Monty has suffered a complete lack of memory since the first day of 1930, all he'll have to do will get Franklin Hood out there and have him throw a lot of passes, to guys impersonating Edelson, Pinckert, Apsit, Musick, Tappan, Hill and Arblebide.

STAR BACKS READY

In the backfield, he'll have Toby Uansa, Jimmy Clark, Bucky Wagner, Gibby Welch, Jim Rooney, Josh Williams, Hood, Tom Parkinson, Eddie Baker and Whitey Fyock to select from.

And as reserve line material, Messers Hirshberg, Guarino, Kern, Tully, Morris, Cutler and Barnes will be ready, nay, even anxious, to go.

The Tipoff

The name of Harry Stuhldreher, former quarterback of the famous Four Horsemen and for the past seven years head coach at Villanova, will be presented to the athletic council at Fordham tomorrow, as a candidate for the coaching job at the New York school and it looks like Harry will get the job.

Stuhldreher's contract expired at Villanova last week. The Rams have been after him since to take over the reigns dropped by Maj. Frank Cavanaugh, forced out of action by ill health, inasmuch as the dough at Fordham figures to come in bigger slices than at Villanova. Stuhldreher hardly will turn the proposition down.

Harry, assisted by Huntzinger and Bob Reagan, both former Notre Dame stars, has enjoyed considerable success at the Philadelphia school. From 1925 through 1928, Stuhldreher's teams won 33 games, lost seven and tied three. In 1928, the team was unbeaten, though held to one tie. The 1930 record was fair, but last year, Harry barely broke even, winning four, losing three and tying two. This year, Villanova was the only team able to beat Temple, winning 7 to 0.

GREENLEAF TAKES LEAD IN NATIONAL CUE TOURNAMENT

CHAMP ROUTS WESTERNER IN FIRST MATCH

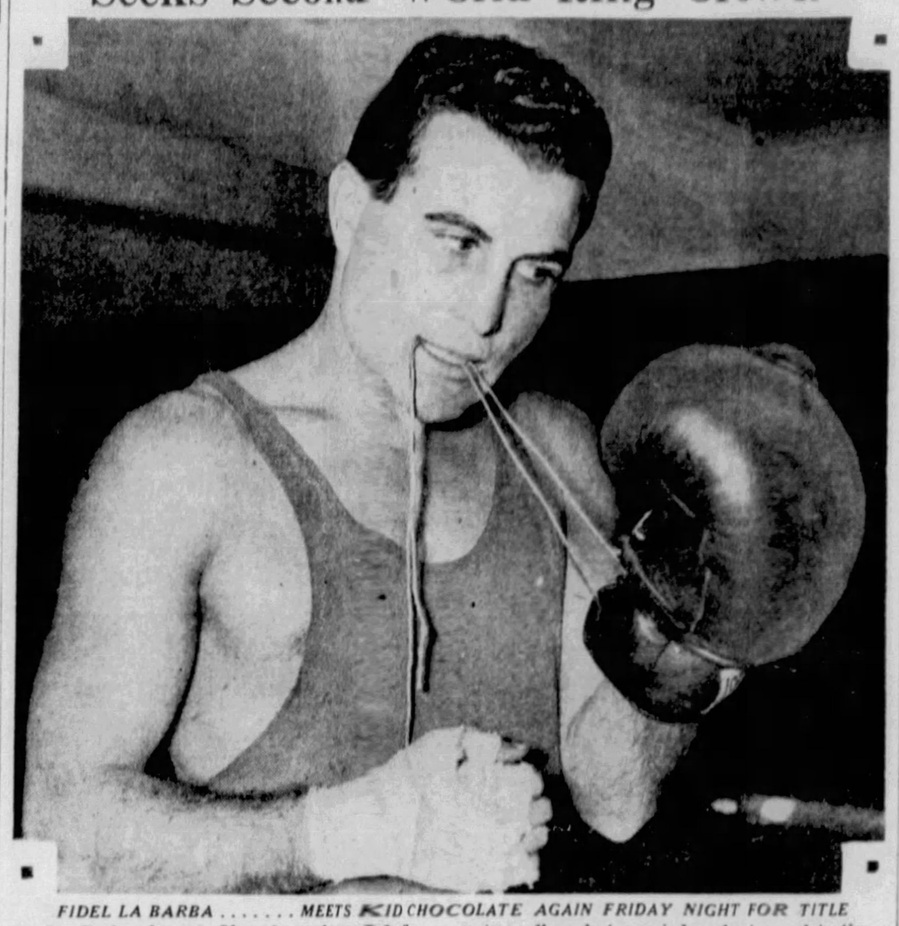
The dapper New Yorker, opening defense of the title he has won 10 times since 1919, swamped James Mills, of San Jose, Cal., 125 to 32, at the Capitol Billiard Academy last night and demonstrated he will take a lot of beating before the 18-day tournament is completed.

Greenleaf was in unbeatable form once he snatched the lead with a high run of 30 in the fourth inning. From then on it was a procession until the champion ran out the match in the twelfth inning with an unfinished cluster of 21.

Mills started well, running 16 in the second inning and adding six more in the third, but thereafter he was at the mercy of Greenleaf's magnificent safety play.

Three matches were to be played today. Frank Taberski, former titleholder from Schenectady, N. Y., was paired against Pasquale Natalie, of Chicago, in the first afternoon duel. Walter Franklin, of Kansas City, was to meet a fellow-townsmen, Benny Allen, in the second match. Tonight, George Kelly, of Philadelphia, runner-up last year, will face the youthful Wilmington, Del., sensation, Jimmy Caras.

Seeks Second World Ring Crown



FIDEL LA BARBA . . . . . MEETS KID CHOCOLATE AGAIN FRIDAY NIGHT FOR TITLE

La Barba, former Olympic and world flyweight champion, set for his bid for the world featherweight crown in a 15-round battle against Kid Chocolate in Madison Square Garden, New York, Friday night. He once quit the ring to enter college, but married and returned to the manly art. This is his third clash with Chocolate. He lost the first, but won the second, and is an even money choice in their "rubber" title. This is an International News Photo Service picture.

SCHOOLS HONOR GRID ELEVENS TONIGHT

By JULIUS LEVIN

Two members of the W. P. I. A. L. will celebrate the close of their football seasons at banquets this evening when the squads representing Crafton and Washington high schools are honored.

The Crafton High School football squad, coached by Pop Wenrich, will be honored in the Knights of Columbus Hall in Crafton, while the Little Presidents of Washington, finishing their first season under the coaching of Bill Cox, hold their banquet in the Washington Methodist Church.

The Crafton affair is being held under the auspices of the Crafton Business Men's Association. Among the guests will be Paul Abele, captain and end of the 1932 Duquesne University eleven; Al Krankota, captain-elect of the 1933 Duquesne eleven; George Kavel and Bill Sample, co-captains at Carnegie Tech; Capt. Paul Reider, Joe Tormey and Bob Hogan, of Pitt; Bob Waddell and Max Hannum, of Carnegie Tech, and local sports writers. Dr. J. J. Corrigan is toastmaster.

School Notes

Four pre-season basketball games are scheduled in Western Pennsylvania today. Aliquippa plays at Braddock, W. P. I. D. at Homestead, Norwin at Vandergrift and Munhall at Mt. Lebanon.

Coach Jock Rosenberg's Rankin High quintet will meet the W. P. I. D. team Thursday.

Quite an elaborate affair is being arranged for the Ambridge High School football squad, which will be honored at a testimonial banquet in the Junior High School tomorrow evening. Ambridge was the winner of the class A championship.

Shaler Township High School will be unable to gain admittance to the W. P. I. A. L. until it becomes a four-year school.

Reports of the various committees will be read at the meeting of the W. P. I. A. L. in the Fifth Avenue High School Saturday morning. John G. Hutton is chairman of the football committee and George W. Cassler is chairman of the basketball committee.

Two Scholastic Gridders Die

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Football injuries caused the death of Donald Carroll, 16-year-old quarterback on the Dunmore High School football team.

Physicians said the lad was hurt internally as he tackled an opponent in the last period of an amateur game Sunday. The youth, listed for graduation from high school next month with honors, laughed and joked as doctors treated him.

His condition was not regarded as serious until last night. Then his father, Joseph G. Carroll, a spectator at the game in which his son was hurt, gave blood for a transfusion.

BELOIT, Wis., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Thomas Green, Jr., 17, is dead here of injuries received in a football game October 29 between Beloit and Kenosha high schools. He had been partially paralyzed since the game.

Benny Bass Stops Reilly in First

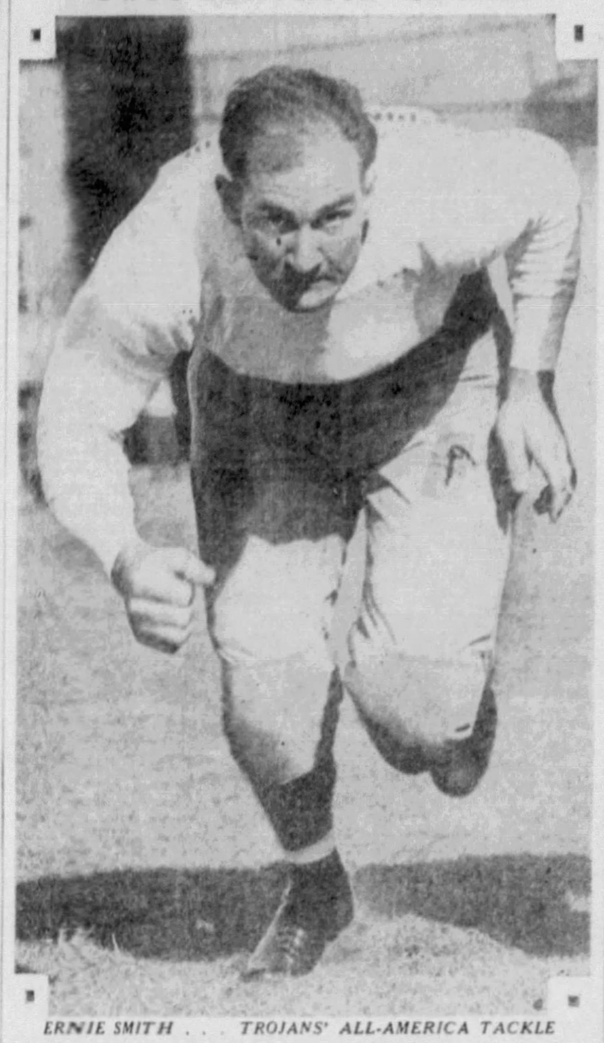
Just Another Smith



ERNIE SMITH . . TROJANS' ALL-AMERICA TACKLE

This fast-charging lineman will be one of the main obstacles Pitt will have to surmount if it is to win its Tournament of Roses game with Southern California at Pasadena on January 2. He's been picked on many of the All-America teams and is touted as a wow. This is an International News Photo Service picture.

C. C. TO HONOR GRID CHAMPS

The annual award of trophies to the champion college and scholastic football teams of Pittsburgh will be conducted by the Recreation Committee in the auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce, on Thursday immediately following a luncheon at 12:15 p. m. The trophies are emblematic of the city championship.

The ceremonies will be opened by President Thomas A. Dunn, of the Chamber of Commerce. The cup provided by the City of Pittsburgh for the winning college team will be presented by Mayor Charles H. Kline. The trophies provided by the Chamber of Commerce for the winning collegiate and scholastic teams will be presented by E. T. Whiter, chairman of the recreation committee. The orchestra of the Perry High School will render musical selections during the lunch.

The occasion also will celebrate the University of Pittsburgh's invitation to play at the Rose Bowl and the Pitt band will participate in the program.

The Rev. G. E. Swoyer, a former football coach and player, will deliver the address of the day.

Guests of the Recreation Committee will include the Mayor and Council, members of both squads with coaches, Chancellor Bowman of Pitt, President Baker, of Tech, the Rev. Callahan of Duquesne University, Superintendent of Education Ben S. Graham and Director of County Parks A. M. Marion.

Paul Reider will accept the trophies on behalf of Pitt and Coach Smith will respond for Perry High.

HEVING TO GO

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Connie Mack, veteran manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, has received waivers on Catcher John Heving. Heving, not a 10-year man, will be released to a minor league club.

FLU EPIDEMIC HALTS DUKES' COURT DRILLS

Basketball practice at Duquesne University has reached an impasse. Coach Chick Davies today is twiddling his thumbs and cussing the enforced inaction which has beset his squad and hoping to be able to resume the much-needed workouts before the week is up.

The Red and Blue mentor was forced to call off practice yesterday when only five members of the varsity squad of 16 men were able to report for drill. The others are ill with the flu. Those reporting were Capt. Bunk McGeever, Marty Reiter, Jim MacDougall and George Meyer and Oscar Schneider.

The hospital list includes Bill Murphy, in Mercy Hospital, Dudey Moore, Art Feldman, Mike Bayusic, Subly Irwin, Frank Serany, Irving Brenner, Paul Birch, Joe Zerilla, Dave Cross and Audley Davies.

Fortunately, the Dukes are not scheduled to open their campaign until December 30, and then against a comparatively weak opponent, Adrian College, of Michigan.

RIOT ATTENDS MAT BOUT

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—An investigation by the New York State Athletic Commission is expected today following the riot which marked the mat bout in Madison Square Garden last night between Ray Steele, of Glendale, California, and Ed (Strangler) Lewis, former champion.

Steele was disqualified for repeated roughness after 32 minutes, 55 seconds of wrestling. Referee Eddie Forbes' decision was the signal for a near-riot.

A group of Steele's followers, including a number of wrestlers, leaped into the ring to protest. One of them knocked out Impresario Curley with one punch. A group of the Garden's special officers hurried to the rescue, ejected Curley's assailant and soon had the situation under control. Fights which broke out in various parts of the big sports arena were quickly suppressed.

Sport Vignettes

the 1919 season, against Syracuse, at Syracuse, and it was a crushing reverse, 24 to 3.

Pennsylvania ranks as Warner's favorite state . . . It was here that he made football history at Carlisle Indian School and Pitt, and now, at 61, he returns to continue his life work at Temple . . . He had his problems during his nine seasons in California, where he was expected to overcome insurmountable odds to beat Howard Jones' great Southern California Trojans each year . . . Material at Stanford, the highbrow college of the Coast, was scant in comparison, and, a year or so ago, there was a movement to abolish all undergraduate students and make it a strictly post-graduate university . . . This plan was modified somewhat, but, for a time, Pop was faced with the prospect of seeing his job go up in blue smoke . . . It is no wonder he gave serious consideration to the attractive Temple offer.

They take their football more seriously in California than we do in the East, and woe betide the coach who does not deliver . . . When Warner lost four games and tied one this year, the wolves got on him, and this definitely decided him to pull up stakes and make a fresh start elsewhere . . . The football fortunes of Stanford were at a low ebb when Warner took charge there, but it built them up, and his record for the nine seasons, despite his disastrous fadeout, is 72 victories, 16 defeats and seven ties . . . In 10 intersectional games, he defeated Dartmouth and Army twice each, so he has nothing of which to be ashamed.

And now for a bit of poetry entitled "All-American Girl?" from the facile pen of Van H. Eshelman, of the passenger traffic department of the Pennsylvania Railroad, to round out the column:

Al Lewis says she has a sort of mania
For quarterbacks at Yale and Notre Dame;
Halfbacks at California, Pennsylvania,

With centers at the Navy and Cornell.

At Stanford and 'way down in Alabama,
She threw a couple tackles in a whirl;
But when she picks a Centre end—I am a
Wee bit inclined to criticize the girl.

I wonder why she never condescends
To flirt a little with those Pittsburgh ends?
—HARRY KECK.

PIMLICO REPORTS LOSS

BALTIMORE, Dec. 6.—(INS.)—Pimlico race track, one of the most historic ovals of the East, operated at a loss in 1932, the Maryland Jockey Club reported today, after its annual meeting. The club again passed its semi-annual dividend, as it did in June.

could go to a recreation center located at Charles street and Greenwich avenue.

Willie, one or two other boys and myself, made application for membership in the Villagers' Athletic Club, which made its headquarters at this recreation center. The membership of the club was made up of young men from Greenwich Village who were employed in various businesses. Most of them were actively interested in some branch of athletics which they followed in the evening after dinner. They had a crack basketball team which played all the teams of its class and for which I eventually qualified.

Willie Ward had a group of sparring partners now and presently could prepare himself for his matches without my assistance. I took to basketball and modified marathon running.

MEETS PROMINENT BOXER

In training for athletic meets with other recreation centers, it was our custom to start out around 8 p. m and run up Fifth avenue to One Hundred and Tenth street, using the Fifth avenue busses for pacers. I competed in these meets off and on for almost four years.

Some time after becoming a member of the Villagers' Athletic Club and after developing somewhat as a runner and basketball player, I accidentally became acquainted with a man who later, for a period, had considerable influence upon me. He was the first real professional boxer that I had known. Willie Green had had a long boxing career, having fought (I even remember the exact number) 168 ring battles between the ages of 17 and 22 years.

Among Green's opponents were Leach Cross, Battling Hurley, Frankie Madden and other tough lightweights of their period. He had at the age of 22 become an actor and played a minor part as a boxer in a stock company. He spent four years in this new capacity. I met him when he was 26, a veteran of 168 ring battles and an actor who had crossed the continent several times, showing in all the big cities before large audiences. "What a remarkable person!" I thought. Willie Green was just 10 years older than I when I first met him and to me had the experience, wisdom and knowledge of Plato himself. Willie came into the recreation center one night with a group of sycophants who to me appeared to be immaculately dressed. Their clothes were distinctly theatrical—the last word in Broadway cut—but in those impressionable days they seemed to me the ultimate in sartorial perfection.

TUNNEY IMPRESSED

It was whispered Willie Green was going to box Willie Ward. We all filed into the gymnasium to see the match. It went two rounds. Green practically played with Ward, until suddenly he landed a left hook which knocked Ward the length of the gymnasium. Ward fell on his haunches. I was greatly impressed by Green's skill and professional mannerisms. He snorted rhythmically and knew how to blow his nose on the glove. These side tricks I noticed particularly; they savored of true professionalism.

Green, when he took the gloves off, threw a row of backflips. This advanced him further in my estimation. Here, I thought, was a great fighter, a great tumbler, a prominent actor and one to be greatly admired.

Upon inquiry I found he was going to train at the gymnasium for a comeback, which he had been contemplating. The next night I went to the instructor and asked if he could not arrange for me to box with Green.

He said, "Yes, Willie will be glad to work with you. I am afraid Ward will not be able to give him much of a workout, so I am sure he will appreciate your working with him."

TAKES HARD BLOWS

The instructor spoke to Green and said, "Willie, here's a kid who wants to box with you."

Willie came over and asked, "Will you box with me?"

"Yes," I replied.

"How many rounds will you work?"

"Three."

"Two or three-minute rounds?"

"Oh, three minutes will be all right."

"Okeh."

I was conscious about this time that the instructor had not introduced me to Green. As soon as we started boxing I knew that Green was going to make a fight of it.

Here I was, 16 years old, weighing about 133 pounds, tall and thin, never having boxed a real professional before, conscious that I was in what was rapidly becoming a real fight. How must I act? The gloves were very small. Green was exerting every effort to knock me down. One time as I was in a corner, I remember very distinctly Green's hitting me with a terrific left hook on the chin and the back of my head hitting the wall. As my head rebounded from the wall he brought in a terrific right which landed squarely on my mouth. These were the hardest blows I had ever received. I did not think it possible that any human being could hit so hard. It was new to me, as was the determined savagery of his attack.

How the 16-year-old Gene broke in as a club fighter, battling for sandwiches and ginger ale, will be related by Gene Tunney in the next installment of his own story of his fistic career.

HOCKEY SQUAD LIMIT SET

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 6.—The Board of Governors of the International Hockey League has decided to allow each team to carry as many men as it wanted, but to dress only 12 for each game.

The meeting was called last night to allow Buffalo and Syracuse to protest a recent decision of the league to cut the player limit from 13 to 11 men.

For seven and a half hours the representatives of the various clubs discussed the question with neither faction able to gain much headway. The Buffalo and Syracuse officials held steadfastly to the 13-man rule, while the Windsor, Cleveland, London and Detroit representatives argued for the player reduction.

It was not announced who offered the compromise plan, but President Charles S. King said it had been agreed upon only after presentation of vague proposals from Buffalo and Syracuse to withdraw rather than play under the 11-player limit. Mickey Roach, coach of the Syracuse stars, and Frank Nighbor, Buffalo coach, both said the 11-player rule would result in the playing of strictly defensive hockey and would cut down the gate receipts, as the fans were accustomed to offensive hockey.

IRISH PASSERS WORRY JONES

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—The chances of Southern California are as strong as its pass defense, Coach Howard Jones indicated in marshaling his Trojan forces for the final drive toward the annual grid tilt with Notre Dame here Saturday.

While all practice sessions are secret, Troy's head man made it known that he meant to give no end of thought and time to the problem of stopping the Ramblers' aerial game.

Southern California has been scored upon only twice this year and both touchdowns directly resulted from passes. These came in the games with California and Washington.

LINE POWERFUL

Coach Jones is quite well satisfied with his defense against running plays, figuring that his line, made up for the most part of veterans who played on the 1931 team, can take pretty good care of this situation.

With Coach Hunk Anderson's squad westward bound, the betting odds were inclined to be rather strong in favor of Notre Dame. Most of the speculators asked for a 10-6 edge in defending the home team.

Ticket sales moved on at a rapid pace with every indication that the Memorial Coliseum with 101,558 seats available by actual count, would be almost entirely sold out if not completely disposed of as Trojan officials predicted.

The Southern California team appeared to be in good condition, save for a few of the second and third-string players suffering from slight colds. Coach Jones intends to drive the squad hard from now until Thursday and taper the team off with the game two days away.

IRISH ON WAY

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—The Ramblers of Notre Dame are rambling westward today with blue songs on their lips and a fighting confidence in their hearts.

Headed by Coach Hunk Anderson, who wore his longest frown as newspapermen swarmed about for a pre-game statement, 35 players, trainers and assistant master minds of strategy, entrained at noon yesterday for Los Angeles, where they will tackle their keenest rivals of football, Southern California's Trojans, Saturday.

GILBERT EVEN WITH MILLS

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Johnny Gilbert, 17-year-old riding star from Pittsburg, Kan., today is on even terms with Hank Mills, of Colorado, in their battle for Jockey honors on the American turf.

Meeting Mills for the first time since the latter was suspended after the Pimlico Futurity, Gilbert yesterday scored with Panchio in the first race at Jefferson Park for his one hundred and eighty-second victory of the season. Mills made his debut on the winter tracks in the same race, but could do no better than fourth aboard Abe Furst, a rank outsider.

They clashed again in the mile and 70-yard feature event, styled the A. S. Thompson Handicap, and again Gilbert had the better of the argument, although finishing third.

EAST TO WELCOME RETURN OF WARNER

ASSISTANT MAY SUCCEED POP AT STANFORD

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Glenn Scobey Warner is coming back East again, back from Stanford to the scenes of his first great coaching triumphs, and the warriors of another day, the men he taught to be famous, will gather again at his feet to worship their idol.

To the men who played their college football for him, Pop Warner is not just a coach. He's not the tactician who came out of Cornell 38 years ago to confound the rule makers with his ingenious circumventions of the playing code; nor the master of gridiron strategy and technique who founded a football system coordinating speed, power, deception and timing so neatly that its general use is rivalled only by Knute Rockne's Notre Dame devices.

FRIEND TO ALL

They are the men who named Warner "Pop." He's the hulking, kindly, soft-voiced patriarch of the pigskin who never spoke roughly to them in all his life. He's never forgotten their names, their faces, though there are hundreds of them now.

Three years ago, Warner came East to see Pitt, coached by Jock Sutherland, one of his disciples, play. He came to Pittsburgh as secretly as possible for he wanted to scout the Panthers, the choice that year, 1928, to play his Stanford eleven in the Rose Bowl.

But he had scarcely spread his huge bulk in the comfort of the biggest chair in his hotel room before the word got around.

From all directions they came then, big, grinning fellows, some getting bald and paunchy, others still carrying the grace of great football players, to move in on him with an abashed "hello, Pop" and a firm handclasp, to stay there and listen to him talk.

HELD RING TITLE

Heavyweight boxing champion at Cornell in 1894, Warner paid much of his way through college painting pictures after gamblers got the money his father had given him for tuition.

Tinkering can almost be called his life-work. He tinkered with the hidden ball and devious tricks at Carlisle until he had the rule-makers slightly dizzy, one jump behind. His tinkering with formations brought about wing backs, the unbalanced line, reverse plays, new variations of shifts and all kinds of gridiron hocus-pocus.

It is believed that Claude (Tiny) Thornhill, all-America tackle under Warner at Pittsburgh in 1916 and his assistant at Stanford during the nine years Pop reigned at Palo Alto, will succeed him as head coach.

Andy Kerr, head coach at Colgate, yesterday denied that he had been approached by Stanford authorities and a like denial was made by Dr. John Bain Sutherland, of Pitt, who is coaching the all-Northern eleven at Baltimore. Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, also prominently mentioned as a possibility for the job left by Warner, refused to comment.

ROONEYS BEAT PENN FIVE

The J. P. Rooneys have added further to the woes of the Penn Five in the West Penn League.

Led by Lindsay Montgomery and Brud Stephens, former Geneva and Duquesne stars, respectively, the Rooneys last night defeated the Penn passers, 31 to 25 in Social Hall, North Side. Montgomery and Stephens each accounted for 10 points, Stephens dropping in five field goals.

In the Greater Pittsburgh League, the Sonny Boys won another game, downing the Coraopolis Y. M. C. A. quintet, 32 to 25.

The Holy Cross team of the West Penn circuit, invaded Jeannette and was defeated, 36 to 29. The J. L. Gahrings downed the Pittsburgh Preps 44 to 34 and the Trinity Angels won over the Beechview Aces, 26 to 15.

Red Shields tripped Kingsley House, 42 to 33; Holy Rosary topped St. Paul, 28 to 26; Question Club won over the Ferris five, 34-28 and the Boys' Club walloped the Burkes, 59-29 in other contests.

Andy Kerr Bids Three More Stars

HAMILTON, N. Y., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Andy Kerr, head football coach of Colgate, has invited Jose Martinez-Zorrila, end of Cornell; Joe Gilbane, center, and Frank Meadows, end, both of Brown, to become members of the East team that competes in the annual East-West classic December 26 on the Pacific Coast.

Previously, Kerr announced the selection of Bob Smith, Colgate captain; Bart Viviano, Cornell captain, and Zapustas, Fordham end. He will pick five more within the next two days, making 11 in all. Dick Hanley, coach at Northwestern, with whom Kerr is associated in rounding up a squad of 22, will pick the other 11.

The Challengers of Pee-Wee Jarrell Social and Outing Club met in solemn conclave in the sports sanctum of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph yesterday afternoon.

It seems everybody wants to fight Jarrell now that the boxing clown has appeared here twice and been on the floor in each fight, against Davy Grove and Eddie (Kid) Wolfe. He got up to beat Grove in eight rounds, and was leading Wolfe all the way until he was knocked dead in a punch in the eighth round.

First of all, there was big-hearted Gus Camp, of the North Side, issuing his daily blast for a return fight for his Davy Grove.

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT

Then up spoke Charley Jones to announce that his Charley Baxter is okay again after having suffered a broken hand in a bout with Cecil Payne at Louisville some weeks ago, and is weighing 140 pounds and is ready for any of the junior-welters or welters and would like nothing better than to tag the Pee-Wee on the end of one of his rights.

Then came Phil Goldstein, acting as spokesman for Ray Winbush, the Hill Negro, who has beaten Max Elling, Tony Constantino and Joey Speigal in the last three weeks. He—that is, Winbush—also wants to fight Jarrell. As the Pee-Wee is scheduled to box in the second bout at the Garden next Monday in an attempt to rehabilitate himself locally, one of this trio may get the match.

CARNEY GETS AIR

Luke Carney came in with Eddie and Fritzie Zivic in tow. He had no business in the meeting, as neither of his proteges is heavy enough to fight Jarrell, so he was promptly ejected from the scene and the meeting proceeded in orderly fashion.

The sergeant-at-arms of the sports department, otherwise Jim Miller, has been instructed to challenge all incoming managers of boxers on the subject of whether or not they have a challenge to issue to Jarrell. If not, they will be sent on their way. We have no use for any manager who is not equipped to enter the elimination on a moment's notice.

Between Rounds

Jules Beck, Motor Square Garden match maker, and Bill Dummer, manager and Lew Raymond, matchmaker of the Arena, will take in the all-star Christmas Fund show in Cleveland tonight. The occasion will draw together a huge army of managers from all over the country, and the rival local matchmakers hope to get a line on a lot of talent for the remainder of the indoor season.

Joe Sorg is arranging an amateur boxing show for the benefit of the needy kiddies under the auspices of the Firemen of South Heights, Wednesday night of next week.

Georgie Nichols meets Martin Levandowski and Young Stubby opposes Young Terry in eight-rounded preliminaries to the Primo Carnera-King Levinsky return bout in the Chicago Stadium, Friday night.

Walter Cobb will be the opponent of George Godfrey in Philadelphia next Monday night. Charley Retzlaff meets Ed Prante and Tommy Galento boxes Jack Gagnon in two other 10-rounders.

Four 10-rounders and two four-rounders are billed in Detroit's Olympia Arena, Friday night, with Tech Varos meeting Paulie Walker in the windup. Eddie Ran knows Rube Edmats, Ernie Maurer engages Henry Gowatch and Billy Marrone tangles with Johnny Jagger in the other 10-rounders, while Jackie Sherman takes on Billy Moore and Gibbs Chenwith takes on Andy (Kid) Brown in the abbreviated contests.

Tony Marino, Duquesne flyweight, who fought a good 12-round bout with Bobby Leitham in Detroit, is in Detroit, is angling for bouts at the local clubs and says the matchmakers are giving him the go-by. Reed Browers is his manager.

Eddie Zivic will box on top in the card of 10 four-rounders at the Arena next Tuesday night. U. S. Carpentier may be his opponent. Nat Litfin will be in the semi-final, and Fritzie Zivic also will be on the card.

Bobby Leitham, the Canadian bantamweight champion, who boxes Jimmy Thomas at the Arena on Friday night, has lost only two bouts, to Pete Sanstol and Spider Pladner, European stars. He has beaten Mickey Barron, Tony Canzoni, Johnny Brenan, Art Chadelaine, Young Peter Jackson, Pete De Grasse, Frankie Wendtram, Willie Davies, Tony Marino and Antol Kocsis, among others, and holds a knockout victory over Art Giroux. He is Scotch-Irish, having been born in Scotland.

Davy Brown will box Nat Litfin in the second bout on the Thomas-Leitham card.

Sid Silas, local lightweight, and Frankie Bojarski, of Erie, box a return bout in the eight-round semi-final to the Tony Herrera-Tony Falco bout at the Garden next Monday night. Johnny Riske meets Ben Bruce in the opener and Pee Wee Jarrell will be one of the participants in the second bout.

Ray Lyle, of Akron, has come up with a sore foot and will not be able to box Anson Green in the semi-final at the Arena, Friday night. Davy Grove has been substituted in his place.

SOUTHERN LOOP GRID TITLE SHARED

DIXIE LEAGUE RANKINGS

1—Tennessee, Auburn.
2—Virginia Poly, Louisiana State University.
3—Alabama, Vanderbilt, Tulane.
5—Georgia, Mississippi.

By W. A. (BILL) ALEXANDER
Georgia Tech Coach.

In the last two games of the Southern Conference football season, an upset changed what looked like a parade to the throne for Alabama Polytechnic Institute (Auburn) into a mad scramble. South Carolina surprised all forecasters by tieing Auburn, 20-20, Saturday, while on the same day Tennessee easily disposed of Florida, 32 to 18.

Bill Alexander

This left Tennessee with seven victories, no defeats and one tie, and Auburn with six victories, no defeats and one tie. It is no disgrace for Auburn to share the title with Tennessee, as the Volunteers undoubtdly have one of the greatest teams in the country.

TEAMS ARE GROUPED

With Auburn and Tennessee bracketed at the top, the other teams also must be placed in groups to arrive at a fair ranking.

In the next group, Virginia Poly and Louisiana State should be placed. Virginia Polytechnic Institute was defeated only by Alabama in seven conference games. Louisiana State University played only four Conference games and won them all, but that is hardly a fair test. The Bayou Tigers also lost to Rice and Centenary, outside the Conference, and were tied by Texas Christian University.

In the next group should go Tulane, defeated by Auburn and Louisiana State University, and tied by Vanderbilt; Alabama defeated by Tennessee and Georgia Tech; and Vanderbilt, defeated by Alabama and tied by Tulane and Tennessee.

There is little to choose among these three great teams. Tulane lost its final game to L. S. U. with most of its regulars, including Don Zimmerman, out with influenza.

MANY CLOSE BATTLES

In the next group are placed teams better than average, that were able to play close games against the leaders and never were routed. Duke lost to Auburn, Tennessee and North Carolina State by close scores. Georgia Tech lost to Kentucky, Auburn, Vanderbilt and Alabama and was tied by Georgia. Kentucky lost to V. P. I., Duke, Vanderbilt, Tulane and Tennessee. North Carolina State lost to North Carolina and was tied by South Carolina on a weak schedule, but they managed to beat Duke, one of the leaders. Favorable breaks could have turned many of the games these teams lost into victories.

Of the others, Georgia and Mississippi showed greatest improvement. Georgia, with a green team, suffered early season defeats, but came back at the finish to beat Florida and Clemson, tie Tech and throw a genuine scare into Auburn. Ole Miss, after years of weak teams, played a hard schedule and lost only three Conference games.

In spite of unfavorable weather attendance at Conference games was good. Most athletic associations reported improvement over last year.

SOX TO NAME DYKES PILOT?

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—The Chicago Evening American today published a special dispatch by Harry Neily from Columbus, O., that reports were current that Lew Fonseca would not be retained as manager of the White Sox through the 1933 season.

Harry Grabiner, vice president of the White Sox, said no change was contemplated, and that Fonseca would be absent from the baseball meeting at Columbus because of the illness of his mother.

Pop Disregards Tears, Pleas Of Players

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Tears fell liberally at the home of Glenn S. (Pop) Werner today when 82 members of the Stanford football squad called and pleaded with him to tear up his new contract as football coach of Temple University and remain here.

Tears filled the veteran mentor's eyes as he said:

"I appreciate it, boys, but I can't do it. I have signed the contract and it's too late."

Members of the squad wept as five of their number, Red Targhetta, Jack Hillman, Bill Bates, Bill Sim and George Gray did the talking. The speakers said the team would "fight their hearts out" for Warner if he would stay.

Warner Signed Temple Contract While Here

PALO ALTO, Cal., Dec. 6.—(INS.)—On the heels of his resignation yesterday as Stanford's football coach, Glenn S. (Pop) Warner who has signed with Temple University, of Philadelphia, blamed "sore-head alumni" for his decision to leave Stanford.

Garbed in a cotton nightgown, the colorful old gridiron warrior was propped up in bed and, between sniffs of hot oil vapor for a bad cold, unburdened himself. He rumbled:

"Students, faculty members and the team have given me splendid support, but some sore-heads among the alumni hurt me with their shafts of criticism."

His friends claimed practically all the criticism of the Old Fox came from Los Angeles because Stanford has lost to U. S. C. regularly of recent years.

Warner said he signed the Temple contract when he was in Pittsburgh recently to match his Stanford squad against Pittsburgh's Panthers, who won, 7-0.

HARMAN MAY QUIT PENN

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 6.—(INS.)—Following close on the heels of the singing of Glenn S. (Pop) Warner as football coach at Temple University, reliable sources today said Harvey Harman, head coach at the University of Pennsylvania, was seriously contemplating a change of scenery.

It was rumored Harman had received two attractive offers, one of them believed to be from Yale University.

The flames of unrest among the Quakers were further fanned today by an editorial in The Pennsylvanian, the undergraduate publication. The article terms the Gates plan more or less of a failure. It says:

"We need the average football player here at Pennsylvania, but he never can come unless there is some means of meeting a $400 tuition. Hence the university must do one of two things—either go out and find men with real football ability, or relinquish its present position in collegiate sport circles and stress only intra-mural football. We favor the former alternative."

BOXERS' NIGHT FOR SEALS

It will be Boxing Night on the program of the Trained Seals of the Sports Department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph during their weekly radio broadcast over WCAE at 7 o'clock tomorrow night.

Bobby Leitham, Canadian bantamweight champion, who fights Jimmy Thomas at the Arena on Friday night, and his manager, Sam Gibbs, will be interviewed by Harry Keck, sports editor. Leitham will tell of some of the high spots of his career, and his manager, who is one of the best informed managers in the sport, will tell of international boxing conditons.

Herb McGee, popular WCAE announcer, who already has told of his amazing mythical feats as a football and baseball luminary, will tell of his days as a boxer, and you'll be surprised at what he has accomplished inside the ring.

Miss Marian Salmon will be at the piano for the theme song.

Cue Stars Meet Here Tomorrow

Charley McCourt and Billy Greenwood, leading exponents of three-cushion billiards in Ohio and Pennsylvania, respectively, will meet in a 50-point match to mark the formal opening of Charley Ellis' new billiard and bridge parlors, 328 Diamond street, at 8 o'clock tomorrow night. Additional 50-point matches will be played Thursday and Friday nights.

Gelbert Need Not Undergo Operation

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Charley Gelbert, shortstop of the St. Louis Cardinals, today had reason to be in high spirits—for one of the few times since his left leg was injured in a hunting accident.

Carey in Hospital, Victim of Influenza

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Max Carey, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, of the National Baseball League, today was a patient in St. Catherine's Hospital, Brooklyn, suffering from a severe attack of influenza. He was taken to the hospital last night.

Carey's physician said the Dodgers' manager had passed a comfortable night and should be up and around again in a week unless complications set in.

SWIMMERS IN TRIALS

Section 1 swimmers of the grade schools are holding their trials today for the championship meet to be held on December 14. The trials are being held in the Fifth Avenue High pool. The Section II trials are scheduled at the same place tomorrow.

CRACK SOCCER TEAMS CLASH ON SUNDAY

By TOM BIRKS

What appears to be one of the best soccer games of the season is scheduled for South Park Sunday afternoon at the Englebrook grounds when Curry, of the Keystone League, and Lawrenceville, leaders of the Central League, clash in the second round of the National Amateur Cup competition.

For many years the Keystone circuit took heavy toll of the members of the Central when they happened to clash in cup competition. That was because the Keystone teams, sticking to the slambang, American style of soccer, never let the Central teams get set. Most of the Central League teams employ what is termed as the European style of play.

This season, however, the coaches of the Lawrenceville team have adopted quite a few of the old country exponents of soccer and have blended some American tricks into this system. The result has been encouraging.

Two weeks ago, Curry eliminated the Zoneys from National Cup play, and the fans heralded Mike Bookie's club as the outstanding team of the district. Since that time, however, the Zoneys have turned the tables on the Broughton outfit. On Sunday's form, Lawrenceville figures to stand a good chance to win.

Last night, the West Penn Football Association held an extended session at headquarters. The executive officers had plenty to say regarding the failure of delegates to attend meetings.

ARMY BOOKS IRISH, NAVY

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Army will reverse its campaign of battle against two climax foes next year, playing Navy on November 25 and closing the season with Notre Dame in New York, December 2.

In confirming these dates Maj. Philip Fleming, retiring graduate manager of athletics at West Point, set at rest all talk about the slightest prospect of a rife in the Army-Notre Dame rivalry. Contracts already have been signed for the 1933 game, he said, and negotiations are under way for a definite arrangement of a 1934 date.

Army's relations with Notre Dame always have been of the friendliest, Fleming emphasized, pointing out that their annual game always proved a sellout, regardless of conditions otherwise affecting football. It is considered a permanent establishment by the athletic authorities, as well as the student bodies of South Bend and West Point.

Army's 1933 gridiron slate, nearly completed, includes a renewal of relations with Illinois. The first of a new series will be played at Champaign. They last met in 1930 in New York after playing at Illinois in 1929.

Veenker Likely To Replace Stagg

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—With the definite assurance that Amos Alonzo Stagg, for 41 years director of athletics and football coach at the University of Chicago, would not be appointed, reports persisted today that George Veenker, football and basketball coach at Iowa State College, has the inside track as the successor to Stagg.

Thomas W. Metcalf, new director of athletics at Chicago, however, said he has made no definite selection. Metcalf at present is director of athletics at Iowa State, having resigned to succeed Stagg.

Stagg will sever all connections with Chicago when his enforced retirement becomes effective next June. He has refused to accept an honorary post created for him as chairman of the university's committee on intercollegiate athletics.

Battalino Changes Mind on Retirement

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Christopher (Bat) Battalino, former featherweight champion of the world, who announced his retirement from the ring a few days ago, has changed his mind about hanging up his gloves for good.

Flynn K. O. Victor In Pro Debut

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 6.—Eddie Flynn, Loyola University welterweight and former national amateur and Olympic champion, is a full-fledged professional today with a knockout victory to his credit in his first "money" bout.

Flynn last night knocked out Harry (Kid) Wallace, of New York, in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round bout.

New Castle, Butler Renew Grid Pact

BUTLER, Pa., Dec. 6.—The New Castle and Butler High School football teams, after a six-year lapse, will resume gridiron relations next Armistice Day, Athletic Director J. B. Storey, of Butler, has announced.

The last game played between the two rivals was in 1926. Grid relations were broken in 1927.

SAINTS DINE TONIGHT

LATROBE, Pa., Dec. 6.—The successful football team of St. Vincent College will be banqueted here tonight. A list of notables has been invited as speakers. Father Jerome Rupprecht, director of athletics, will be in charge of the program.

Forbes

Savings May Be Socially Unjustifiable

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

We read a lot about the importance of other companies taking similar action, with a view to reducing production costs.

Owen D. Young recently remarked that cold, calculating, theoretical economists urged drastic deflationary steps be taken "which," Mr. Young commented incisively, "simply must not be taken."

The United States today is confronted with an infinitely more basic problem than the paring of costs here and there by cold-blooded action, including the ruining and wrecking of a whole community by closing down its main plant simply because costs can be somewhat reduced by doing the work somewhere else.

Transcendently important is it for Myron Taylor and other industrialists to ask themselves what would be the social consequences of taking such drastic steps simply in order to nick a few pennies or a few dollars from production costs.

OUR MASTERS of gigantic corporations should grasp the grave, basic fact that they must be motivated, not entirely by cold-blooded monetary considerations, but by intelligent, thoughtful, profound patriotism.

What would it avail the Steel Corporation and other mammoth corporations to follow a course which meant a somewhat better balance sheet if the following of such a course were calculated to aggravate unemployment and perhaps precipitate serious social trouble?

These are not normal times. Therefore, our most powerful industrial organizations must not be governed entirely by normal business considerations if such considerations imperil our whole economic structure.

There are times when doctors are all for performing immediate operations. There are other times when they will not operate until the patient's strength has been built up. Our financiers, our industrialists, our executives must put business statesmanship ahead of mercenary motives if these tend to inflict human hardships.

Important though the giant corporation has become, important though mass production has become, important though the preservation of dividends has become, there remains something immeasureably more important: man, the wage-earner, the citizen, the public.

This fundamental fact is commended to the most careful, broadgauged, farsighted consideration of executives who have the power to bankrupt a whole community by closing down plants. Patriotism as well as profit must be taken into the reckoning. Social considerations must be balanced against dollars-and-cents savings.

We cannot have, we must not have, cold-bloodedness calculated, if carried to extremes, ultimately to bring on bloodshed.

PRICE-CUTTING can be either helpful or hurtful. Far too much business is being done at this moment without a reasonable percentage of profit. Everybody throughout the whole country would actually be better off were all industry and business being conducted on a rational price level.

A 10 per cent cut requires a turnover of 1.85 times.

A 15 per cent cut requires a turnover of 2.95 times.

A 20 per cent cut requires a turnover of 6.25 times.

COAL TARIFF RULE ASKED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(INS.)—Attorney General Mitchell is to be asked for an opinion on the validity of the Customs Bureau ruling which held that the tariff act violates this government's most favored nations' clause of commercial treaties with England and Germany insofar as importations of coal are concerned.

Secretary of the Treasury Mills agreed to this couse today, with Secretary of State Stimson concurring, after conferences with Senator David A. Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, and Gen. Brice Disque, of New York, executive director of the Anthracite Institute.

Reed said:

"Employment for at least 30,000 miners and a market for at least 10,000,000 tons of coal, both anthracite and bituminous, is involved. We merely want a good lawyer to pass on the matter."

The tariff act provides that coal may come into the United States duty free from any country which imports more American coal than it sends here of its own. In practice this affects only Canada and Mexico.

Reed pointed out that this provision would apply to Great Britain or to Germany the minute their imports of American coal exceeded their domestic exports to this country. He continued:

STOCKS SLIDE AS TRADING SLOWS UP

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—The stock market today quickly recovered the setback suffered late in the previous session, but buying interest waned at the higher levels, and the list eased a little after mid-day.

After pushing up rather briskly in the first hour, the trend of the market flattened out, and trading again slackened to a snail's pace.

Wall street, in the main, has been strongly of the opinion that balancing of the federal budget would be a fundamental prerequisite of sustained economic recovery, and in consequence approved President Hoover's message to Congress as it dealt with that subject. The proposed manufacturers' excise tax has been strongly urged in leading banking quarters.

The signs of disappointment which appeared in more "wet" quarters in the financial district yesterday, on defeat of the repeal resolution had largely vanished today, for it was pointed out that more immediate concern has been with modification. The President's failure to mention the subject, however, was noted with considerable interest.

Heaviness of the French franc attracted considerable attention, as that currency, which was so strong at the expense of the dollar a few months ago, slightly slightly below the point at which it would be theoretically profitable to ship gold from Paris to New York. The United States gave up a large portion of its huge gold stock during the past year, and it has been freely predicted in international banking quarters that France would be next to yield part of her excess stocks of the metal.

Brokerage quarters were inclined to the view that the share market had become oversold, and there was considerable talk of the possibility of a technical rally. Professional traders, however, remained extremely cautious, and such buying advices as were issued almost unanimously suggested purchases only on declines.

CROP FIGURES AID WHEAT

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—Grain prices averaged higher early today, owing to expectations that unofficial monthly crop reports would make a bullish exhibit. Reports of harvest delays in Argentina were also a strengthening factor. Opening 1/8 to 3/8 up, wheat afterward reacted somewhat. Corn started unchanged to 1/4 off and later held near the initial limits.

Fresh upturns in wheat prices followed issuance of the private monthly crop summaries indicating that owing to widespread severe drought the present condition of United States winter wheat was the lowest on record. Corn and oats eased on moderate selling. Provisions weakened a little with hog values.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The Curb was quiet but firm today. Efforts to resume yesterday's rally appeared to attract little following and most of the narrow gain seemed to reflect further short covering.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

PICK VANDERLIP TO HEAD A. V. C.

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Frank A. Vanderlip, 68 years old, former head of the National City Bank, will head the Aviation Corporation of Delaware as chairman of the board, International News Service learned exclusively yesterday.

Lamotte Cohu is retiring as president, it also was learned.

Both changes are part of a reorganization of executive personnel called for in a compromise settlement of the recent bitter proxy fight between E. L. Cord, the automobile millionaire, and the company's management.

The changes were agreed upon at a secret meeting of the corporation's board yesterday afternoon.

As Chairman Vanderlip will succeed Robert Lehman, of the banking firm of Lehman Brothers. Lehman is expected to head the corporation's finance committee.

The post of president has been offered to William Averill Harriman, former chairman of the board and more recently a director.

Air Transport Lines Start to Show Profits

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

AIR TRANSPORTATION is one industry which has fought its way through the depression and is taking its operations out of red ink and is putting them into black ink. The complete transformation from losses to profits has been achieved by a few outstanding transport companies and the industry as a whole promises to reach the goal of profits in the near future.

It will be recalled that the great impetus to the commercial development in air craft took place in the final years of the business boom. At that time there was too much enthusiasm about aviation. This resulted in the flotation of many companies improperly financed and headed by men who did not know their business. Since those boom years, however, the unnecessary organizations have been eliminated. At present we hear less about being "air minded." The public has stopped being foolish about the novelty, the thrills and the stunts of airplanes and has started to take them as a matter of course —as a good means to get some place quickly.

The ballyhoo has been taken out of the business of traveling by air. The public is finding out just how useful air travel can be. The operators of air lines have stopped dreaming about revolutionizing the world and have settled down to operating efficiently. The upshot of it all has been that air passenger travel has been increasing in spite of the general depression and, after years of losses, the way is being made clear to show profits from operating air transport lines.

Security Owners Outline Progress

AN INTERESTING picture of the progress made by aviation appears in a survey of the industry just released by the Security Owners Association. This organization devotes its activities to railroad development. It made its study of airway transportation in order to determine the probable influence of aircraft on railroads and to find means for co-ordinating rail and air transportation.

"In the domestic air service today there are in operation 29,724 miles of air transport routes (more than 10 per cent of the total railway mileage), over 85 per cent of which mail is flown, with 92 per cent of the air mileage handling both passengers and express. The airways are not showing the effects of the current economic depression, as are other public carriers; in fact, for the first six months of 1932, 217,588 passengers were carried, an increase of 28 per cent over the same period last year.

"If the present trend is any indication of the future of air travel, the railroads would do well to regard this agency with more respect. Two years ago railroad executives could say there were no profitable unsubsidized air lines. It has been found that over favorable terrain, and with sufficient available traffic, it is entirely possible for air transport companies to carry passengers profitably without subsidy. The engineering development of aircraft, hence reduction of operating costs, is enjoying accelerated progress; and while it is probable many air lines always will be dependent upon the mails for profit, the trend towards profitable passenger service is very definite.

Trend Is Toward Smaller Planes

THE SURVEY finds that the present trend is toward the construction of smaller planes for transport purposes. Although the Ford company has built a 2,500-horsepower plane, experiments have been made with a ship for commercial use with a cruising speed of 200 miles an hour, carrying 10 passengers and with an operating cost of 20 cents a plane mile. The report continues:

"Well-operated routes with such planes and with fare equal to or lower than railway rates undoubtedly will make marked inroads upon long-haul railroad and highway traffic."

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The bond market was somewhat more active and firmer today. In the foreign department French government 7s and 7½s were up fractionally to new 1932 tops. British 5½s firmed, as did Italian 7s and Australian 5s. The Argentines, Belgians and Japanese sagged. United States government issues were barely steady.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows (000 omitted in sales column; United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

Joyce's Relatives Go After Her When They Learn Of Her Absence

CHAPTER XL.

Joyce knelt beside him, drew his head to her shoulder. He seemed content to rest there, breathing harshly, twitching.

After a long time, he spoke.

"I'm trying to get away, the day after tomorrow. I think I can get passage. We could be married tomorrow."

"Well? Can't you understand? I've—more to offer you now, worse luck," he muttered.

"But we can't do things this way," she told him gently. "You must go home, be with your mother. You cannot force me on her at this time. It would hurt her terribly."

His determination wavered. He said distracted, "Perhaps. But you'll follow—as soon as you can? If I can't get away to come back? Your mother could come with you, we could be married at your embassy."

She was still wordless. Her arms were about him. Could she let him go? Was there that between them which would draw her across the sea, which would compel her to follow him, to the end of the world, if need be; that which would send her hungry and friendless and barefoot to find him, if need be?

BASIL MOROSE

He shook himself free of her clasp, seized her shoulders in his hands, bent his bewildered face to hers.

"Joyce—you don't, you can't mean—that you're going to send me off alone—with no hope? For that will be the end, do you understand, the end, Joyce!"

He struggled to read her eyes. He cried shaking her between his two hands, shouting at her, "Answer me, will you! God—you don't love me!"

* * *

Louisa Sheldon, returning from market, stepped from her car, and the chauffeur, gathering up bags and bundles, departed in the direction of the kitchen. Mrs. Sheldon went into the house, which was cool and dim after the hot sunlight upon the village streets. She marketed twice a week, with regularity and efficiency. Her cuts of beef must hang just so long, she was particular about fowl, the butcher always breathed a sigh of anxiety as the big black car stopped before his shop and Louisa ascended therefrom. She was, he thought privately, a holy terror, but a good customer.

The house seemed deserted. It was after 12 o'clock. Joyce was probably on the beach, wearing the bathing suit which was her grandmother's despair. Elizabeth would be there, too. It was customary for Elizabeth to sit on the beach, beneath a canvas umbrella, while Joyce bathed. Louisa insisted on this. It took a little of the curse from the bathing suit.

JOYCE IS MISSED

Louisa had driven Elizabeth into the village and left her to do some errands. Then she could take the beach-bus and join Joyce at the bathing pavilion.

The telephone rang.

Louisa answered it herself. She listened to her daughter-in-law's voice on the other end of the wire, frowned, spoke briefly, hung up the receiver. Then she went into the kitchen where the chauffeur, having disposed of his burdens, was exchanging pleasantries with the cook. He hopped off the edge of a kitchen table as Mrs. Sheldon entered, and stood there before her, grave, erect, his putteed legs close together, all human expression wiped from his face.

"Miller, take the car and call for Mrs. Sheldon at the bathing beach," Louisa ordered. "Stop by here on your way out and tell me if Miss Joyce's car is in the garage."

Some time later Elizabeth arrived home, flushed from the sun. She came into the house, confronted her mother-in-law.

"Miller says that Joyce is out in her car. I waited for her at the beach, as I told you. We had planned to meet at 11. But she never came."

Mrs. Sheldon, senior, remarked, "It is getting to be a habit with her—flying off, without leaving word. I dislike it very much."

Luncheon was announced. They ate in almost complete silence. It was a silence so heavy, so impossible, that when the telephone rang again Elizabeth heard the sound with acute relief. That would be Joyce, of course.

"For Mrs. Lennox Sheldon," said the butler.

LEARN OF TRAGEDY

She went into the library and Louisa could make nothing of the murmur which alone reached her. Presently Elizabeth returned, obviously agitated. Louisia, looking at her, thought with critical resentment, why doesn't she age?

"It's dreadful," said Elizabeth, still standing. "That was Mrs. Gaston. She has just heard that Basil Staines' brother and his wife were killed in an airplane accident, flying to Paris. She says Basil telephoned her, he'd had a cable, was leaving for home at once."

Mrs. Gaston was Sally Morgan's cousin. Louisa Sheldon said, abstractedly, "How very dreadful—" and then looked up at her daughter-in-law. "I wonder if Joyce knew this?"

"Lily Gaston saw Joyce—this morning. She was leaving the station telegraph office in her car."

"I see."

Mrs. Sheldon rose. She walked past Elizabeth, went up to Joyce's room, and stood, a moment, marking a certain slight confusion—the linen frock tossed over a chair, the hatboxes pulled out, the tennis shoes in the middle of the floor.

Going to the desk she saw scraps of paper in the wastebasket, on the desk an envelope, Basil's name and address stamped in the corner.

Elizabeth had followed and now stood at the door. Mrs. Sheldon turned and looked at her.

"Joyce has gone to town to see Basil Staines."

"He must have written—he learned it late last night, Lily said. Well, why shouldn't she go?" Elizabeth cried, suddenly. "They're friends, she'll want to say goodby to him."

Mrs. Sheldon shrugged.

"Friends or not, does not it seem a little odd, to go off in this manner, without a message, not leaving as much as a note—dashing up to town in her car, making appointments with a young man, doubtless at his apartment? He wouldn't meet her in public today, you know. I am convinced of this, certain that she stopped to wire him."

"But if they care for each other—if they're engaged?" Elizabeth questioned, breathlessly.

"You heard what Joyce told me. I do not believe they are engaged."

GO AFTER GIRL

"Please notify Miller I want the car. I am going to town."

"But—"

"Do you think I am going to sit here and wait for Miss Joyce to come home at any hour which pleases her?" inquired Mrs. Sheldon grimly. "No. I am going up and bring her back."

"But the heat—the trip—"

"We will stay the night in New York," Mrs. Sheldon answered. "I will leave word for Norris to telephone the caretaker to get rooms ready."

She left the room, went to her own. Elizabeth stood there, indecisive, her face paling. She bit her under lip, took a step toward the door, waited, and then drawing a deep breath, walked out and to her room.

Elizabeth spoke in a stifled voice.

"Very well," agreed Louisa, tonelessly.

They got in the car, were driven off. After a long time Elizabeth spoke to the statue who sat beside her.

"What are you going to say to her?"

Mrs. Sheldon did not answer. Elizabeth said, desperately, "Suppose she isn't there?"

"She is there," said Louisa, evenly. "Do you think I would risk making a fool of myself? I'm done with being made a fool of—"

Elizabeth twisted her hands together. They were cold, for all the sun's heat beating in at the open windows.

"But—it may—it must be perfectly innocent," she faltered, reconstructing the situation as she herself was trying—and failing—to see it. "Basil is called away suddenly—he hasn't time to come to say goodbye. She went to him on impulse, unhappy, so sorry for him."

"There is no use trying to make excuses for her, Elizabeth. You are terrified."

Elizabeth cowered back in the car. Louisa proceeded, bitterly,

"May I ask what you are doing here, Joyce?"

Not another word was spoken between Louisa and Elizabeth until they turned into a city side street.

Louisa leaned forward. There at the curb stood Joyce's car, unmistakable. She drew a breath of hard triumph and motioned silently. Elizabeth shrank as from a blow, closed her eyes.

It was about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The two women left the car and entered the house door, which stood open. Louisa did not pause to ring Basil's bell, she noted the floor merely, took the lift, Elizabeth beside her. At the door of the apartment Louisa raised a steady hand and knocked.

Joyce was limp in a big chair, a little sick from lack of food, from heat, from fatigue. Basil got up from a footstool beside her and said briefly, "The man back, I suppose."

He went to the door. He walked like an old man. Three hours had passed since Joyce had reached him, and he was no nearer to persuading her than before. He had stormed, pleaded, even wept.

He opened the door and instantly stood back, allowing Louisa Sheldon and her daughter-in-law to pass into the room before him. They had no word for him, no greeting. He was aware of a tremendous and shameful embarrassment and a resentment. He knew that in his present position no man has yet succeeded in looking like a hero. He blamed Joyce bitterly; he hated her, he loved her. Now, she would have to marry him. He was conscious of this wild, underlying hope. These women would force her to it, she had no escape.

Joyce had risen. She stood quite still, her face drawn, her eyes heavy, her frock creased, smudged with dust. She said nothing, looking from one woman to the other.

Mrs. Sheldon spoke.

"May I ask what you are doing here, Joyce?"

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Last winter the members of the South Hills Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club organized a Junior Komic Club Orchestra, which furnished most of the musical entertainment at the meetings each Saturday.

During the summer months the orchestra disbanded. Many of the members moved and it took Manager Harry Koch some time this fall to recruit enough musicians from among the members to get the orchestra started. However, with the help of Joe Cardarelli, member of the club and one of the most popular boys in Mt. Lebanon, the South Hills Syncopaters, as the newly-reorganized orchestra will be known, started rehearsals last week, and will make its first appearance at the meeting on Saturday, December 17.

The members and the instruments they will play are:

Robert Weber .....Tuba
Charles Cardarelli .....Clarinet
Jack Hanna....First saxophone
William Abbott.....
..... Second saxophone
Don Wise .....Tenor saxophone
Sam Lang .....Trumpet
Earl Fowler .....Trumpet
Cliff Olendorf .....Drums
Robert Duda .....Piano
Tom Courtney.....Trombone
Roy Baldwin.....
....Accordion and trumpet
Joseph Cardarelli .....Leader

MEMORIAL CHAPTER

Each week the meeting of the Memorial Chapter of the Junior Komic Club is becoming more and more popular with the youngsters of McKeesport. This is shown in two ways—the number of children registering at the meetings each Saturday and the number of old members who are now attending the meetings regularly.

The stage show offered for the members Saturday consisted of 13 acts and there were that many more for which there was not sufficient time. However, the acts which did not work last week will entertain the youngsters this Saturday. Those that entertained last Saturday were:

Marjorie Kardos, Mary Evans, Regina Razney, Stella Barton, Josephine Crawford, Vera Hollywook, Hazel Phillips, Dorothy Gavalier, Gertrude Usko, Evelyn Usko, Dorothy Smith, Jean Brown, Norma Karber, Lillian Barkmeyer, Andrew Malos and Michael Evans.

NEW MEMBERS

If you are not a member of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, send your name and address, name of your parents, date and year of your birth, school you attend, to the secretary, Junior Komic Club, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., and a membership card will be mailed you.

Roxyfeller City Pretty Big

We went over to Roxyfeller City last night and it's a dream city. They won't wake up for years.

It's the biggest thing ever tackled since Peter the Great built Petrograd some few minor centuries ago. If you ever get to town you must come over.

The city contains nothing but microphones and theaters. What kind of a town is that?

The biggest theater will seat around 10,000 people edgeways. Then there are two or three other auditoriums for rehearsals and a very fine system of fire escapes for auditions.

They have 70 or 60 sound-proof rooms for funny noises and crooning. The elevators are constructed so quartets won't miss a beat on the way to the roof. The orchestras start playing at dawn and chase the hour hand around the clock. They can furnish music for any occasion by just opening a window.

We never saw such magnificent surroundings. And that's saying

We don't know the reason for all that granite wax works business. But it makes the place look nice and visitors don't have to live there.

It's just like the steel pier at Atlantic City without the M. G. M. lion.

You've gotta take a look at it. It cost more money than Europe can borrow. Of course, it scares you at first because you ain't sure about the chandeliers. One of those things might get away from the guy who is holding it.

All we can do is tell you about it. They haven't started printed picture postcards yet. But they're going to have their own post-office, hospital and restaurants and that proves it ain't no hollow tree.

FRISBY PENS HISTORIC DOCUMENT FOR GOVERNMENT ARCHIVES

NOTE—All Congressmen are asked to write a brief account of themselves for the Congressional Record. We take pleasure in printing the manuscript just submitted by Horace Walpole Frisby.

My early life was spent on a steam launch, and at clam bakes. I lived all alone with my wife and her five children, most of whom were still in the second grade.

One day I said to the little woman, "Little woman, though it is a dark and stormy day, I have promised to take some prominent business men to a clam bake."

"I will be back," I promised, "though I will have to hasten down the batches."

So I went and the storm was awful. We were all shipwrecked.

We lived on clams 'til along comes a month with R in it, and all the prominent business men starved except me, as I had kept my thermos bottle of clam broth for just such a day.

Years later I was rescued by the Boy Scouts and on returning home I looked through the window and what did I see but Mrs. F. sitting on the knee of a bearded stranger.

"Pardon me," I said, entering the house, "but I used to live here and I don't remember you."

"I am the present husband of this here lady," explained the stranger. "Years ago her husband went to a clam bake, so I married her and all of the children are in the third grade."

"That's fine, and now I guess I'll be going," I replied, and with a tear in my eye I stumbled away to forget becoming later known as the Congressman who sings at his work.

Let the Drones Go

Council Can Reduce Taxes Without Crippling Any Essential Branch of the City Government.

The cost of running the city in 1925, the year before Mayor Charles H. Kline assumed office, was $20,209,822.

Mayor Kline's $25,000,000 budget can be reduced $5,000,000 without crippling any essential branch of the municipal government.

For political purposes many drones have been placed on the payroll during the Kline administration. It is to be hoped Council will have the courage to let them go.

The suspicion prevails that Council may protect the Mayor's political favorites and cut the budget by dismissing useful and non-political employes; then, when a protest arises, will say, "You see, it is impossible to reduce expenses without discharging valuable officeholders and eliminating necessary services."

The suspicion may be without foundation; but it will be well for citizens to watch the budget hearings closely.

Christmas Demands Gifts

It Would Be a Grave Mistake to Omit the Usual Feature of the Celebration.

Some persons have agreed not to exchange gifts this Christmas. They will be doing the community an injury if they omit this traditional feature of the celebration, and it is to be hoped they will change their minds.

The proposal to abandon the giving of gifts is no doubt due to the idea that because of reduced incomes the purchasing of presents will be a burden. But prices have come down as much as incomes, so that it is no harder to buy gifts this year than it has been at other times.

Christmas would not be Christmas without Christmas gifts. More than ever the community needs this tangible expression of love and good-will.

December is the big month of the year for most retail merchants. They count on the Christmas business to make up losses they may have sustained earlier in the year. Some have been holding their sales and clerical staffs intact, and maintaining wage scales, in the face of difficulties, in the hope that the holiday trade would justify them.

If this trade should suffer because of the abandonment of Christmas giving, the effect would be serious not only to the merchants and their employes but to the whole community, including those who, by omitting their customary spending, were responsible for the misfortune.

To omit gifts is to show the spirit of Old Scrooge before he reformed. There is no need to be miserly. Catch the spirit of Tiny Tim. Make it the usual Merry Christmas for everyone who looks to you for Christmas remembrance. Refuse to enter into agreements to omit gifts. Preserve the fine old Christmas tradition.

Two Payments Due Soon

Foreign Debtors Will Try to Dodge, but There Is No Escape for the American Taxpayers.

On the fifteenth day of this month, all American citizens who enjoyed an income last year must pay to their government the final installment of their income taxes.

On the same day there will be due from the nations of Europe huge sums of money which they owe on account of loans advanced to them in consequence of the World War.

There is this difference in the two classes of debts which fall due on the same day: THE CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES HAVE NO ALTERNATIVE BUT TO PAY. The foreign debtors will get out of making any payment at all if they can. Those that pay will do so grudgingly and in bitterness of spirit toward everything American.

Has the government suggested to you, fellow Americans, a moratorium of your debt because of world economic conditions?

It has not.

Have you proposed to your government that payment of these taxes should be postponed or forgiven altogether because of your inability to pay without serious hardship?

You have not, because you intend to pay.

Have you ever thought of asking your government "to review the entire subject" of your income taxes, with a view to having all payments canceled?

Of course you have not.

But that is just what these foreign debtors have been doing for the past year or so, and there are some American citizens who are so internationally minded that they have been doing everything possible to encourage these foreign debtors to believe that their debts to the United States will all be forgiven, provided they can postpone payments long enough and make their threats vociferous enough to divert attention from the fact that these debts are honest debts and should be paid.

American citizens cannot ask for a moratorium such as that which was granted to Europe 18 months ago and which those nations now wish extended.

American citizens cannot plead poverty when the income tax collectors come around, no matter how real their poverty may be, no matter how bare their treasure chests may be of gold bars and gold sovereigns and francs redeemable in gold.

Americans will receive no attention from their government if they threaten that payment of their income taxes will upset their financial condition and the stability of the world.

The taxes which Americans have to pay this year are high partly because President Hoover in 1931 granted the moratorium which was to "save the world," and the world, including the United States, was worse after the moratorium than before.

So when all good Americans make their payments on the fifteenth day of this month, they must realize that the tax was made necessary in large part because of Europe's failure to pay. They will also realize that the money they are giving to the government is not money which they have borrowed and spent; it is not even money which they owe, except in so far as they have been taxed arbitrarily to meet governmental expenses. It is money from the pockets of Americans who had a taxable income in 1931, irrespective of whether they will have any income at all in 1932.

There is no moratorium for American taxpayers. Only European debtors enjoy that privilege.

The Forgotten Man

By Nelson Harding

The words "we won't be taxed to pay,"
Are greeted with a big hooray,
But that loud shout across the tide
Cannot be echoed on this side.

The burdened figure over here
Is not considered in that cheer,
He's only an American
Taxpayer, a forgotten man.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Matrimony, an Experiment

It is really no feat to get married, if you are a bright girl and not too hard to please. The Big Achievement, in these days, consists in STAYING married.

* * *

So many girls are beginning to look upon marriage as an experiment, rather than as a sacrament, that you no longer have to send them solid silver wedding presents. Anything showy, that will last a few years, will do.

* * *

Husbands are like gray hairs. The more a woman gets rid of, the thicker they seem to come. Yet, the much and often married woman may not be so much of a varietist as she is an optimist and an experimentalist.

Every woman has a deep conviction down at the bottom of her soul, that she will some day, somewhere, somehow, find the man she has always dreamed of finding. The Perfect Combination of husband-and-lover.

* * *

Given a large share of idealism and plenty of bad judgment, she will go right on seeking him from the nursery to the wheel-chair. The glamorous flawless Charmer, she is seeking, doesn't inhabit the flesh or a dinner-coat. So, she will go right on marrying her Dream-Man and waking up with a shock, to find herself tied to another commonplace being, who mumbles at breakfast, yawns through dinner and growls through a party.

* * *

And the more of an idealist she is, the greater gambler she is, the worse mess she makes of love and marriage—and the oftener she makes it.

Every time one "experiment" fades or shows up all-out-of-drawing, in the cold north light of matrimony, she finds another—and imagines that she has matched the glorified pattern of her ideal, at last.

* * *

Then she discovers that she has merely exchanged one disappointment for another—one set of troubles and problems for another set.

* * *

The amazing thing is that, no matter how many men she has tried and found wanting, she can always find a lot more men eager and willing to go to the operating table and serve as another "experiment."

* * *

Because a man never recognizes an experimentalist. And, even if he did, nothing would shake his naive conviction that he could fulfill all a woman's desires and ideals.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The sudden void created by Jimmy Walker's dramatic exit echoes with mawkish sentiment. Poor Jimmy! A few weeks before he had been tossed to the wolves. The only crime, to Tammany, is "being found out." So Walker has no political future.

He walks alone. Those who know, say, during his final hours in America, many who had been close to him found it convenient to be "just leaving town" when he telephoned. And, going up the gangplank, the chipper ex-Mayor had the droop of a moulting sparrow.

Yet, in the isolation of rural Southern France, for which he reputedly is headed, Walker can look back upon the last six years of his life as the most glamorous of any American of his time. It was brilliant, as an electric light is brilliant and just as quickly extinguished.

He was the most popular idol of the day in his country's biggest city. The people forgave his blunders with rousing cheers. He dismissed inuendoes with a cock of an eyebrow and a wise-crack. And yet, against this extraordinarily happy fellow range insurmountable barriers, including the full stop of history.

Nothing is so cruel as political failure. The actor can go on acting, the painter painting, and the writer writing. But the politician, with his qualities dammed up, cannot sit in an empty room addressing imaginary audiences. His only comfort is the smarting sense of imagined martyrdom.

Jimmy's finale was a snarl. A timid reporter inquired the name of a lad with whom the Mayor's name was linked. "How long," asked Jimmy, "have you been around?"

* * *

When Bob Garland was a Baltimore newspaperman, a periodical shakeup imported a new managing editor from New York. He was capable, alert, but pontifical. After tossing the staff into bewildering topsy-turvy, he began high-hatting everybody on the payroll. One day Garland, summoned to the throne, was greeted pompously. "Listen," said Garland in a cool, competent voice, "you'll have to come down to my plane. I can't talk to you. I'm out of altitudes." Instead of his being dismissed, they became best of friends, and are to this day.

The famous Globe, now a continuous movie with outside ballyhoo, recalls my first premiere in the big town at this playhouse. The offering was lovely Christy MacDonald in "Spring Maid." A pass from Burns Mantle, bless him, seated me directly left of a plushy Amazon who, at intervals, concentrated on conveying messages to friends several rows rearward. Finally she scribbled on the leaf of a program and passed it back. I was conscious of sudden amused staring. As the curtain fell, I had an idea the tossed note might have dropped. It had. I waited for the crowd to thin and, inching along, retrieved it. It read: "Get the striped shirt on my left!"

For those seeking brief escape from the time-tabled life, few spots are so prosaic as the Central Park Mall on a clear wintry morning. Here, an outdoor nursery offers some of the prettiest babies in all the town. Some in wind-blown walkers, others in perambulators actually embossed with family crests. The other morning, tykes in woolen caps and trousers were playing ring-around-the-rosey. A little detached, one, a scowling die-hard admiral, was struggling to sail a paper boat in a cistern-sized tarn. "Won't it sail?" I tituped. He looked firm but not unfriendly, replying: "My muvver doesn't permith me to talk to stranguths." I heel clicked into salute with: "All right, admiral, always obey your mother!" And he toddled toward his prim-as-a-lampost nurse, gurgling: "Funny mans!"

* * *

Then, the red-cheeked butterball with a woolen tuft atop her tam like a tangerine. She sat on a bench, aloof in thumb-sucking contemplation. The nurse kept calling her, but she affected not to hear. Finally she yelled, petulantly: "Diss a minnit, I'm finkin."

Like most childless people, I'm confused around children. Yet, I have one stock story about Mr. Lickety Split and the Flying Apple which gets over fairishly. That is, to date, no one has walked out on me. Sometimes I have even felt that I should give up columning and let myself go in for bedtime story telling. Who's responsible for that quick shove?

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Even if a man hasn't anything else left, he'll talk about his pride.

He may be hungry, homeless, ragged, unemployed, battered by poverty, ill health and injustice; yet he will still be able to battle back if he can preserve his pride. He will insist that his pride is his most precious possession, and resent your indifference to his pride more furiously than any other affront.

Sometimes I think that pride IS life. Remember the old story of creation:

"AND THE LORD GOD FORMED MAN OF THE DUST OF THE GROUND AND BREATHED INTO HIS NOSTRILS THE BREATH OF LIFE: AND MAN BECAME A LIVING SOUL."

The "breath of life"—the strange, secret stirring which changed a lump of mud into a man—call it the "breath of God" of the "will to be;" call it "Pride;" the miracle still goes on. Still pride changes mud into men, and holds them fast from going back to mud again.

That creative spark—it's the one thing we all cherish above every other possession; the one thing which we know to be essential. Yet how little we know about it! And how stupidly we mess it up!

There's just one way to go about getting Pride, and that is to set that "creative spark" to work—DO SOMETHING OR MAKE SOMETHING OF WHICH YOU CAN BE PROUD.

That's the only reason for being proud. That's the only sort of pride that will do us any good or win us any standing. Yet look at the scores of silly reasons upon which we base our pride.

We're proud—

Because our house has a fine view.

Because our grandpa wrote a book.

Because we have the classiest fur coat in our set.

Because we had An Awful Operation.

Because we've had A Terrible Sorrow.

And 9,624,639 other reasons equally absurd! Not one of those reasons is a real cause for pride. We deserve no credit whatever for our nice ankles or grandpa's book or the city's tallest building. And it won't enhance our own self respect, or increase the esteem of others, to be proud over such things. It will only make us look silly—and increase the emptiness and discontent of our lives.

PRIDE CAN'T BE BORROWED. PRIDE CAN'T BE BOUGHT. PRIDE MUST BE BUILT. AND IF YOU DON'T BUILD YOUR OWN PRIDE BY YOUR OWN ACHIEVMENTS, YOUR LIFE WILL BE A TRAGEDY NO MATTER HOW BEAUTIFUL OR BRAINY YOU ARE, OR HOW COLORFUL YOUR BACKGROUND.

YOU'LL DO MORE FOR YOUR LIFE BY PUTTING UP ONE JAR OF JAM OR MAKING ONE GOOD SHELF THAN BY OWNING THE SLICKEST YACHT THAT EVER PLOUGHED THE SEVEN SEAS.

But Where Do We Come In?

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The British note contains nothing other than a reiteration of the arguments urged from the beginning that the economic welfare of the world demands that the United States taxpayers assume the debts of the debtor nations. It reiterates the assertion, which historically and legally is untenable, that the payments of the debts were conditional on the continued payment of reparations.

It asserts that President Hoover and his administration conceded the soundness of this theory when the moratorium was granted last year; and this was probably the intention of the administration. But the American people have made no such concessions; the Congress has repudiated the idea.

The British note, like all such notes, assumes on our part an unlimited capacity to pay. It reasons that, with the debts eliminated, the nations may hope for economic recovery since the taxpayers of the debtor nations will be relieved of the necessity of paying, and may settle down, with a clean slate, to an economic rehabilitation.

But there can be no economic rehabilitation for these nations if they have to pay the debts, it reasons; and it seemingly assumes that we may take over the debts of all the nations combined and share in the economic recovery. The reasoning is not conclusive.

Debtor Nations Working In Close Co-Operation

The note does not confine itself to the plight in England, with which the average American sympathizes. The British make common cause with the other debtor nations, some of which are reeking with prosperity compared with the United States.

Evidently we have been right all along in assuming that the debtor nations are working in close co-operation with the view to transferring their debts to the American taxpayer. It had been hoped that the British note would have confined itself to the British case, but it is otherwise. It rather insists that if we reconsider the British debt settlement we shall do something more for the French taxpayer at the expense of the American taxpayer.

There is nothing in any of these notes to indicate that the United States has been generous beyond all precedent in history in the settlements made. No notice is taken of the fact that every concession we have made has been at the cost of the American taxpayer. The debtor nations are not content that we assume a heavy portion of their indebtedness—as we have. We are asked to assume it all.

If we assume it all, and the debtor nations are let off of it all, we are told that the nations thus relieved will be in position to build up economically, and that we, by assuming all these debts, will be by virtue of the added burden be able to share in the economic rehabilitation!

One or the Other Was Wrong

Some time ago, when the Chancellor of the Exchequer presented his budget, it was observed that no provision was made for the payment due the United States December 15. This meant no provision in taxes had to be made by him.

About the same time the budget of the United States was presented and it included this December payment. By counting on the December payment we did not have to make provision in taxes to the extent of the payment due.

One or the other was wrong.

If we now renounce the payment due we are off just that much in our budget, which, despite the appalling taxes levied, is not enough to balance the budget, and we must increase taxes now to make up for the loss.

So it is merely a matter of transfer.

Some One or Other Must Pay

The British note sets forth the special difficulties in the case of England and these are real and easily seen. It is because of these special difficulties and the fact that in the settlement the English accepted less generous terms than others, that there is some sentiment here favorable to a revision of the English settlement.

But the note implies that unless we assume more of the debts of all the other nations, or all their debts, we may as well do nothing at all.

Naturally it would be a fine thing if all these war debts could be wiped out entirely so that all of us could begin all over again. But someone or other must pay—and will pay. We borrowed the money to loan to Europe; we are obligated to pay back that loan with a much higher rate of interest than we are asking from the debtors in the settlement we made.

There is no suggestion that we share in the general relief. The plan is that as far as the actual debts are concerned we shall not share. The others are to be relieved entirely, and we are to increase our burdens correspondingly. By some subtle reasoning we are told that the relief of the debtors and the increased burdens of ourselves will act for the equal benefit of all.

No 'Liquidation Of the War'

Are the people who own the bonds we sold to get the money to loan to the debtor nations ready to cancel these; or reduce them to the extent that we again reduce the debts? That would make it simple. But we have not heard any such suggestion. Everyone, as far as the debts go, is to be relieved but us; and we are to assume all the burden; and this is going to be a great thing for us!

The other nations got vast and extremely rich territory from the Germans—and we got and asked nothing. There is no suggestion that we be paid in territory. Or that this territory be turned back to Germany in the interest of Germany's rehabilitation. There is to be no "liquidation of the war" when it comes to this.

The debtor nations are to hold what they got from Germany; to be forgiven what they got from America in loans; and we who got nothing from Germany are to pay the loans ourselves.

Thus it is going to take a great deal of "educating" of the vulgar mind to convince it that there is anything proposed other than making us the burden bearer of the world.

Let England Make Her Payment

They do not intend to give up any of the territorial spoils of war to get the money to pay.

The plan is not to tax their people, to hold on to the spoils of war we did not get, or ask; to continue to spend billions a year on purposes of war, and to transfer the debts to us. Then with the debt tax burden lifted from their shoulders so they can move faster in the economic competition of the nations, and with our shoulders bent lower under the enormously increased burden of all their debts, we can all prosper together!

Let England make her payment on the fifteenth, and then send us another note confined to the special case of England asking for a reconsideration of her settlement; that will be much better for England.

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

If you have marital troubles, keep them to yourself.

Such subjects should not be discussed even with closest friends.

When a married man or woman speaks of the frailities of his or her partner there is always cause to mistrust the one who complains.

He or she is usually not of the right sort and in most instances is principally to blame for disturbances in the home.

It cannot be expected that people who must live so closely as husband and wife should get along with absolutely no differences.

There may be quarrels of more or less serious nature.

Especially will there be differences of opinion when two strong-minded persons are matched.

But such persons should be imbued with sense enough to give credit, each to the other, for being honest in the convictions presented.

There is no reason why matters of this kind should cause any serious rift in the matrimonial craft.
